Dealings With Darlan Temporary—Roosevelt

Move Justified By Stress of African Battle

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—President Roosevelt emphasized today that the United States Army's dealings with Admiral Jean Darlan in North Africa were only a "temporary expedient," intended to save both lives and time in carrying the attack to the Axis.

The emergence of Darlan, until recently Vichy's defense chief, as a leader in North Africa in collaboration with American forces, had brought bitter criticism from fighting French forces, who called him the "No. 2 traitor of France."

In a formal statement read at a press conference, President Roosevelt said no permanent arrangement would be made with Darlan "in view of the history of the past two years."

Nations' Reactions

"People in the United Nations likewise would never understand the recognition of a reconstituted Vichy government in France or in any French territory," it declared.

"We are opposed to Frenchmen who support Hitler and the Axis. No one in our army has any authority to discuss the future government of France and the French empire."

"The future French government will be established by the French people in metropolitan France or overseas—but by the French people themselves after they have been set free by the victory of the United Nations."

The arrangement with Darlan, the President added, was "justified solely by the stress of battle," and brought about Darlan's order to French troops to cease resistance.

That in turn made it possible to avoid a "mopping up" operation in Algeria and Morocco, which, Mr. Roosevelt said, might have taken as much as one to two months.

"Such a period would have delayed the concentration for the attack from the west on Tunis, and we hope on Tripoli," he continued. "Every day of delay in the current operation would have enabled the Germans and Italians to build up a strong resistance, to dig in and make a huge operation on our part essential before we could win."

The President also announced that he had requested the "liberation of all persons in northern Africa who had been imprisoned because they opposed the efforts of the Nazis to dominate the world."

He also said he had asked the abrogation of all laws and decrees inspired by Nazi doctrines. In an aside, he made it clear that this included anti-Jewish laws and decrees.

British Forces Take Derna and El Mechili

By PAUL KERN LEE.
CAIRO, Nov. 17.—(AP)—The British Eighth Army has captured Derna and Mechili, narrowing the enemy-held gap of Libya and Tunisia to 900 miles, but pursuit of the disorganized Axis army was slowed today by bad weather and sharp rear-guard actions.

The surviving Germans and Italians in North Africa in effect were hemmed in by three great Allied forces, at least two of which were closing the jaws of a trap.

The Eighth Army was moving west despite short, hot stands of Axis suicide groups which had the choice only of fighting rear-guard actions or surrendering.

Moving East.

The British First Army and American troops were moving east from Algeria into Tunisia. (The Germans said U. S. troops were bombed at the southern boundary of Tunisia and Algeria, which is only 200 miles from Tripoli and 900 miles from El Mechili.)

Yet a third formidable force was known to be deployed in the Lake Chad region 1,000 miles south of Tripoli across the desert. The force might already be on the move from fighting French territory.

Marshal Erwin Rommel's exhausted remnants were scattered all along the coastal route from Derna to El Agheila and along an island shortcut from El Mechili to Misus and El Agheila. They were scattering hither and thither as they fled—employing their last effective means of defense now that German planes have been cleared from the air and the great bulk of the African Corp's materiel has been captured or destroyed.

Flight in Egypt.

The weather kept most of the RAF grounded, giving the retreat a safe passage from the terrible bombings which have beset him along his 400-mile flight from El Agheila in Egypt. U. S. fighters ranged the forward areas yesterday without encountering a single enemy plane.

The fall of Derna placed the British within 150 miles of Benghazi along the coastal road. El Mechili, on the desert trail flanking the green mountains along the coast, is only 125 miles east of Benghazi and 220 miles from El Agheila at the eastern base of the Gulf of Sirte.

No Axis stand is expected at Benghazi where demolition fires have been observed, but there is some indication of a fight at El Agheila where salt marshes narrow the passageway along the Mediterranean to about 30 minutes' travel.

"Our troops have occupied Derna and El Mechili," a terse headquarters communique said. "The Eighth Army continues its pursuit of the enemy."

General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery has not lost contact with the fleeing Germans and Italians, guns, 15 mortars, 28 machineguns and 10 blockhouses.

Rickenbacker Rode Forty Miles on Wing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Captain Edward V. Rickenbacker, lost in the southwest Pacific when his plane was forced down October 21 and rescued three weeks later, rode the wing of the rescue plane while it taxied 40 miles on the ocean surface to its base, the War Department disclosed today.

A department announcement said that although Rickenbacker still needs at least two weeks in a hospital to complete his recovery from the long exposure at sea, he already has expressed his desire to complete the mission to which he was assigned by Secretary of War Stimson—a tour of inspection of aviation facilities in the southwest Pacific.

Lieutenant W. F. Eadie, USN, and Aviation Radioman L. H. Boutte found the raft containing Rickenbacker and two companions, the Army said, landing their two place Kingfisher observation scouting plane with the aid of flares on a sea of medium swells.

Colonel Hans C. Adamson was taken from the raft and squeezed into the cockpit, the Army said the Navy reported, but there was no room in the plane for Rickenbacker and Private John F. Bartek, so the two men were lashed to the wings and the plane started taxiing back to its base.

Marines, Army Reinforce Grip On Solomons

AT SEA WITH U. S. FLEET OFF GUADALCANAL, Nov. 6.—(AP)—(Delayed)—The strength of the United States' grip on the Solomons area has been increased greatly by two successful landings by Marine and Army troop reinforcements in the past few days.

Together, they are the largest landing operations since the initial storming of the Solomons on August 7.

One force of Marines went ashore near Henderson Field. These fresh troops now are believed to have joined other Marines who were pushing westward in the Matanikau river area against Jap positions.

The other landing was made almost simultaneously.

Without Loss.

The success of this daring operation without loss of a man or a piece of equipment was the result of careful planning, favorable weather with low cloud ceiling, meticulous attention to details of security and excellent co-operation of all land-based, scouting and fighting aircraft as well as the Navy's PT torpedo boats and submarines.

Our force of warships and transports crept in under cover of darkness and low clouds early on the morning of November 4. Three forces had been lighted on the beach to point out the landing spot. This had been done by a handful of Marines who had fought their way there on land from the Henderson Field area.

As daylight was breaking the transports steamed close to shore and most of the warships began a protective patrol back and forth in the surrounding waters.

A force of Marine raiders went ashore first to clear the beachhead, but found no opposition. Then transports began unloading. From this warship we saw landing boats racing ashore with soldiers and much equipment, then speeding back to the transports for more loads.

The shore area looked extremely rugged, with the jungle extending to the water's edge. There were high, thickly wooded mountains a few miles in the background.

Unloading proceeded smoothly and speedily throughout the morning until 11:30 a. m. when we received a warning that Japanese planes were on the way.

Quickly the transports got underway.

'Turning Point' at Hand, F.D.R. Reports to Nation

America Must Continue Fight, Says President

By RICHARD L. TURNER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—President Roosevelt tonight hailed American successes in Africa and the Far Pacific as an apparent "turning point of this war," but added a warning that there was time only for working and fighting, none for exultation.

Earlier he had described the recent Naval battle in the Solomon Islands as a major victory for the Allied cause. Tonight, addressing the Herald-Tribune Forum by radio, he singled out one participant in that battle for a hero's praise—Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan.

Admiral Callaghan, before he was killed in action, sailed his cruiser, the San Francisco, directly into the guns of the Japanese armada and spread devastation among it, the President revealed.

The San Francisco, still afloat, has been recommended for decoration for outstanding service, the first ship of the war to be so honored. In addition to these things, Mr. Roosevelt stoutly defended the administration's policy of withholding news of Naval losses until it is

Japan's Sea Losses To Soar, Says Navy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—An upward revision of Japanese navy losses in the sea battle of Guadalcanal was predicted confidently today by naval authorities, who emphasized that the announced total of 23 ships sunk and seven damaged was based on incomplete reports from the Pacific war zone.

Yet to be heard from, it was said, are the clean-up operations by American planes and surface units which may have discovered and finished off crippled units of the enemy's fleeing fleet. There was also a night engagement of November 14-15 of which nothing has been reported except that it was fought.

President Roosevelt, at a press conference today, described the shattering of the Japanese armada as a major victory, and revealed that Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan, his formal naval aide, who was killed in the struggle, performed the daring feat of taking a 10,000-ton cruiser up against a 25,000-ton Japanese battleship at point-blank range.

Such American cruisers are equipped with only eight-inch guns as compared with 14-inch weapons carried by the type of Japanese battleship involved in the fight, and the President said Admiral Callaghan had done a very courageous thing. He remarked that he was very much upped at the news of Callaghan's death.

A strong indication that the list of Japanese losses is as yet incomplete came from Major General A. A. Vandegrift, commander of the Marine forces on Guadalcanal island, in the course of a message of congratulations on the naval triumph.

"The enemy has apparently suffered a devastating defeat," he told the Navy Department. "The battered helmets of the fighting forces on Guadalcanal are lifted in deepest tribute to Rear Ad-

Stop Deferring U. S. Employes, F. D. R. Urges

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—President Roosevelt asked all federal government departments and agencies today to cancel any military deferment that had been given governmental employes.

Here is the text of his memorandum:

"I am most anxious to make sure that no man should be deferred from military service by reason of his employment in any federal department or agency either in Washington or in any other place.

"If any such deferment has been given to anyone within your respective jurisdiction, would you please arrange for cancellation thereof as soon as possible and notify the selective board having jurisdiction?"

"No further requests for deferment by reason of such employment should be made either by the agency or by the employe."

"I am sure that in the overwhelming number of cases this action will be welcomed by the young men themselves who are involved."

"I know that in certain technical or highly scientific or specialized branches of the service there are a few employes who, by reason of unique experience, are really irreplaceable by women or older men. If there are any such in your opinion fall within this category, will you please write me the full details of them so that their services may be passed on individually."

OPA Reduces Gas Ration to Three Gallons

By The Associated Press.

Eastern motorists last night had their gasoline allowance reduced effective November 22 while in congress a drive developed to postpone nationwide rationing of gasoline scheduled to start on December 1.

The Office of Price Administration announced that beginning November 22 the value of gasoline ration coupons in A books now used in 16 eastern states will be reduced from four to three gallons.

Rationing is now effective in 17 eastern states, but one of those—West Virginia—was excepted from today's order, for the time being.

An official announcement said that other measures to curtail fuel oil consumption in nonwar industries and for heating of certain types of buildings are now being drafted and will be announced soon.

Leon Henderson, OPA administrator, said the cut had been ordered because of the shortage on MADRID, Nov. 17.—(AP)—All three Spanish military services were authorized today to order a partial mobilization.

The army, air and navy ministers, it was explained, are being allowed to call up the necessary number of troops to reinforce units under their respective commands.

The Berlin radio earlier had announced such a step was impending, interpreting it to mean that Spain was anxious over the invasion of North Africa rather than the fact that German troops now stand all along that country's northern frontier with France.)

Henry Kaiser Launches Ship In Three Days

71-Hour Lapse Between Keel-Laying and Christening.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Nov. 17.—(AP)—A Henry J. Kaiser shipyard claimed another record today—a three-day ship launching.

A tank landing craft slid into the Columbia river from his Vancouver yard here last night, just two days, 23 hours and 40 minutes after keel-laying.

Size of the vessel was secret, the Navy announcing only that it was smaller than the 10,500-ton Liberty freighters with which Kaiser previously set construction speed records.

Yard officials said the 71-hour, 40-minute launching was one-fourth of the normal time for such ships.

Kaiser's Richmond, Cal., yard holds the record, four days, 15 1/2 hours, for Liberty ship launchings.

Captain Damon Gause, Georgia hero, will be the principal speaker, and the Fort McPherson reception center band will furnish music for the evening. The rally will be held at the Lightfoot football park.

Critical WAR WOOD

If we knew how long the war would last, we could overcome the difficulty many old-timers use to have at breakfast where-in the syrup and biscuits would not exactly run out equal. None of us know when the war will terminate, so we are compelled to do our best to conserve, and preserve, that which we have. One of the greatest conservators of exteriors and exposed woodwork around the homeplace is paint, and paint is available, notwithstanding the fact that white lead comes direct from metal. Therefore, this season of the year—a good dry time—is favorable for repainting, both inside and outside. Our paint store is conveniently located, and we are delighted to serve you modern, durable, pleasing colored paint. The value of a neighborhood is frequently determined by the appearance of your house, and that of your neighbor's. If everyone would keep his house painted, property values would be maintained.

McKellar Withdraws Support of Barkley In Poll Tax Battle

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Southern senators filibustered today against the anti-poll tax bill in a bitter session which saw Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, withdraw his recommendation that Majority Leader Barkley be appointed to the supreme court.

By a series of roll calls and other delaying tactics, including reading and correcting the complete journal of yesterday's proceedings, the southerners for the fourth consecutive day prevented Barkley from bringing formally before the senate the controversial bill which would eliminate payment of a poll tax as a voting prerequisite in eight southern states.

Whether McKellar's sharp criticism of Barkley—his senate seatmate for years—would end in an open challenge to the Kentuckian's leadership in the next congress remained to be seen. McKellar himself declared "there are no circumstances on earth by which I would become an applicant for Senator Barkley's place as leader."

Crowd of Civilians.

Republican senators and a large crowd of civilians and soldiers in the galleries watched the intraparty row flame hotter by the hour on the Democratic side of the chamber. Denied the floor at one point, veteran "Cotton Ed" Smith, of South Carolina, announced his intention of speaking "40 hours" when recognized by the chair.

Mississippi's Senators Bilbo and Doxey, both violently opposed to the bill, had piles of books ready for use in the marathon debating session. Bilbo has said he felt about 30 days would be required to expound his ideas on the matter.

McKellar bitterly assailed Barkley for moving Saturday that McKellar and seven other senators be arrested and brought to the chamber in order to obtain a quorum—"which he could not do anything with when he got it."

Called Front Seat.

"Being called a filibusterer has no terrors for me," McKellar said. "I wish to say to this senate that I shall filibuster to the last limit against this iniquitous measure which is being put forth in heat and passion."

Barkley sat in his usual front seat while McKellar shouted. The majority leader's face flushed as his critic recounted how he had voted for Barkley when the latter was named majority leader by a one-vote margin.

McKellar told, too, that last month he prepared a petition to President Roosevelt, signed by several other senators, recommending Barkley's appointment to the supreme court to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Associate Justice Byrnes.

Whole Episode.

He said he never dreamed that "the man I had recommended so highly would single me out as one of eight senators to be arrested." The whole episode, he said, was "a shocking performance."

The anti-poll tax bill, which passed the house in a different form, has never formally come before the senate despite Barkley's efforts, begun last Friday, to bring it up.

Today the opponents, spearheaded by Senator Russell, Democrat, Georgia, made use of an assortment of parliamentary delaying tactics to prevent Barkley from moving its consideration during the "morning hour" which ended at 2 p. m. A motion to consider the bill, lodged before that hour, would not have been debatable under the senate's rules. The delay, however, left the motion open to unlimited debate.

Russell charged the legislation was an effort to "smear the south" and control the states' election machinery like "the carpetbaggers and chancellors of the Reconstruction period." Like McKellar, Russell expressed indignation at the issuance of warrants for the arrest of absent senators.

Mock Air Raid Over Tech Set Friday Night

Antiaircraft Unit To Defend School Against CAP Plane.

Georgia Tech will become a "munitions dump" for the night, and the Tech ROTC antiaircraft unit will defend it with their lives, theoretically speaking, while a Civil Air Patrol plane zooms over at 8 o'clock Friday night in practice maneuvers.

The demonstration will be open to the public, at a reasonable distance, but its main purpose is to put 500 future officers through their paces with a newly acquired antiaircraft gun, five search lights, listening devices, and other antiaircraft weapons whose nature has not been released.

All the paraphernalia used in the Friday night's demonstration will be on display Saturday in the drill field on Third avenue for the benefit of fans at the Tech-Florida game.

As a part of their regular drill, the boys were practicing yesterday with their antiaircraft gun, which was given to Tech only a month ago and is of the most modern design.

A plane from the Civil Air Patrol flew over the field at 12:30 o'clock, and the 14 men who handle the gun immediately went into action. While the cub circled and dipped, the boys swiveled the gun's long muzzle around and around, as deftly as if it were a toy, keeping the black dot that was the "enemy" between their sights for the full 15 minutes of the drill.

One of the officers explained that 14 men weren't really necessary in handling the gun, but they want to use as many men as possible to give them training.

Farmer With 9 Pigs Can Be Deferred

Pigs is pigs, allowed Ellis Parker Butler many years ago—and they are also a draft deferment, if you have enough of 'em.

That's what the state director of Selective Service announced yesterday following receipt of a notice from the War Man Power Commission that farmers having as many as nine pigs dependent on them should be deferred.

Colonel Cliff Hatcher, assistant state director of Selective Service, said the state office is also giving more consideration to the men who had 40 turkeys, dairymen who have eight milk cows, poultry raisers with as many as 250 egg-producing hens or 500 broilers, and any farmer raising a considerable amount of vegetables or other food stuff.

They're producing food that is vital to the war effort, says the Man Power Commission.

Mrs. Roosevelt Returns From Visit to Britain

President Greets Wife at Airport Near Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt returned to the White House today after an arduous wartime visit to England where she was the guest of King George and Queen Elizabeth.

The first lady had no immediate comment but the White House said she would hold a press conference at 11 a. m., eastern war time, tomorrow.

She left New York for England October 21 and made a whirlwind inspection of military and civilian activities there. Britons expressed amazement at her seemingly tireless energy.

The President's wife arrived at an airport near here by plane this morning and was met by Mr. Roosevelt. There was no announcement as to when she left England or the route she followed in returning to the United States.

Rommel and Nazi Heads Convene, Says Reuters

LONDON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—A Reuters report, issued under an "at the German frontier" dateline, said today that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel had been holding conferences with Adolf Hitler, Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler and other high Nazi at Munich which were likely to affect the composition of the whole Axis general staff.

The dispatch said that the German public still considered Rommel a hero, but that a crisis which was precipitated by his old political enemies had been intensified by his disaster in North Africa.

Tokyo Claims Super-Battleship North Carolina Was Damaged

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP)—The Tokyo radio claimed in a broadcast tonight that the 35,000-ton North Carolina, America's new $70,000,000 super-battleship, and the 33,400-ton Idaho "fled after receiving terrific damage at the hands of the Japanese Navy" in the Solomon Islands last Saturday night.

The agency Domei quoted "authoritative quarters" to this effect, and said that the Japanese imperial headquarters on Wednesday afternoon (Tokyo time) would issue a communiqué showing that "the Japanese naval victory was so overwhelming that the United States attempts at a counter-offensive in the South Pacific is a thing of the past."

This broadcast was an obvious prelude to an announcement seeking to offset Washington's communiqué on Monday disclosing the smashing of the Japanese invasion fleet and the sinking of 23 ships including a battleship and five cruisers.

Washington figures that United States losses were only two light cruisers and six destroyers. The Tokyo radio said "belief was expressed" that Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan was killed in the engagement. Washington had announced this fact more than 24 hours before.

Tokyo had been strangely silent all day yesterday and today on the week-end battle, and while Washington was announcing details of the great American victory the Japanese were broadcasting elaborate claims of a supposed Japanese naval victory near the Santa Cruz Islands October 26.

The text of tonight's Japanese

Signs pointing to such a maneuver were seen by competent foreign military and diplomatic sources in advices from Germany and Axis-dominated countries.

These informants, who could not be identified by name, said their best information was that Hitler had withdrawn, or was in the act of withdrawing, 40 divisions, including 16 armored, from the Russian front.

Most of these divisions were reported being concentrated in the Balkans, especially in Greece, for "big action" in the eastern Mediterranean. Some, however, were said to have been sent to the west for rest after their terrific mauling by the Russians.

This big scale shifting of forces, these informants said, accounted for the slackening of the Nazi drive in Russia, where the invader is said to be building new defense lines west of the Don.

Besides their own private information, the observers here said they had seen accounts from Turkey indicated something was afoot in the Balkans. Among these was a dispatch telling of German use of Bulgarian labor for hurried construction of new airfields near Turkey's northwest frontier.

It is delaying action, possibly Hitler's order to Axis forces to hold at all costs in Tunisia and Berlin's report that Marshal Rommel soon would attempt to make a stand, all were prompted by the frustrated Fuehrer's desire to create a delaying action from possibly even to bisect the Mediterranean at the Sicilian strait, in preparation for a campaign in the middle east.

Military observers pointed out that this campaign always was on Hitler's program, except that it was conceived originally as one of a pincers with Rommel as the other.

Now in view of Rommel's rout the alternative is a sickle-like slash, probably through Cyprus and Syria and possibly even Turkey.

Marshal Siegmund List, who led the German conquest of the Balkans, was believed to be in charge of the current Nazi concentrations down there.

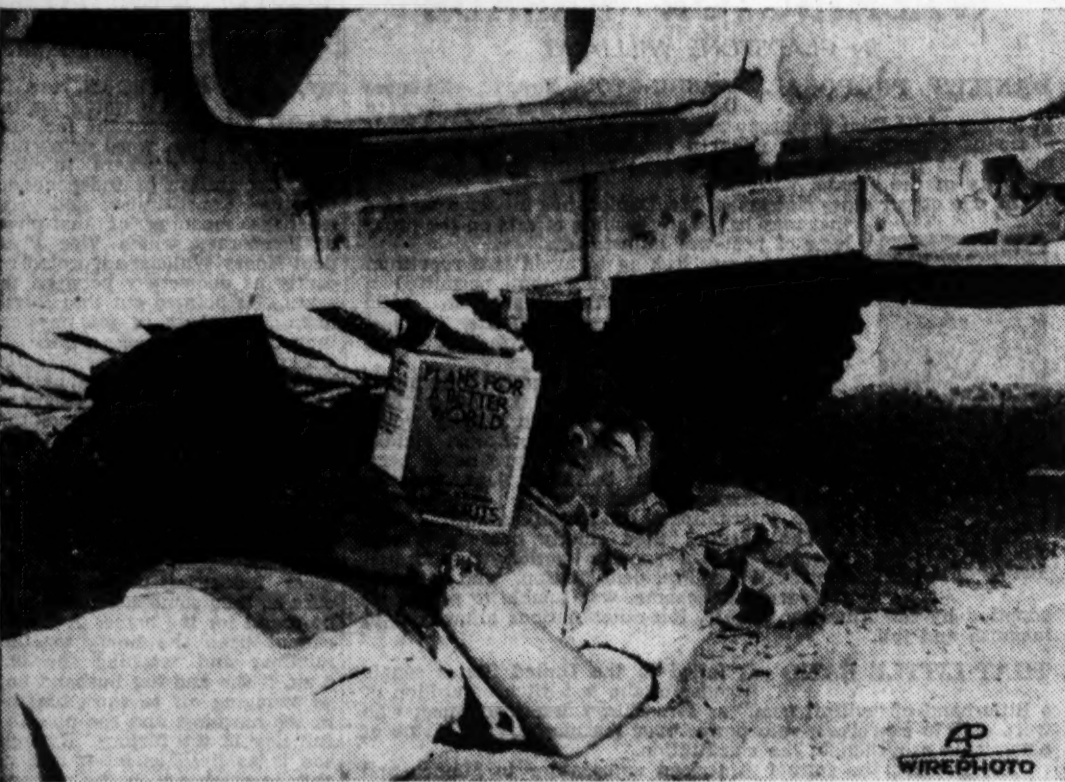

broadcast, which was made at 9 a. m. Wednesday, Tokyo time:

"Authoritative sources revealed another bombshell announcement from Imperial headquarters was to be expected this afternoon, and expressed the view that the so-called 'third' Solomons battle reported last Saturday as in full swing within waters close to the enemy's land-air base was concluded that very night when the United States' mainstays, the North Carolina and Idaho, fled after receiving terrific damages at the hands of the Japanese Navy."

"The belief also was expressed by the same circles that Rear Admiral Daniel O. Callaghan was killed when his ship was made a target of Japanese shelling."

Startling Results.
"The anticipated announcement of Imperial headquarters this afternoon, these quarters state, will not only reveal startling war results to discredit the United States Navy, but will amount to telling the world that the Japanese naval victory was so overwhelming that United States attempts at a counter-offensive in the South Pacific is a thing of the past. They stressed that this afternoon's announcement will tell the story."

The Japanese broadcast was not only interesting because of its tardiness in view of Naval communiqués issued late yesterday by Washington and the Honolulu headquarters of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific commander-in-chief, but for this reason:
The Japanese partner evidently is unaware that other Axis partners already had "sunk" the Idaho, which is reported as being damaged in the Solomons.

Navy Says Jap Losses To Soar

mirals Callaghan, Scott, Lee and Kinkaid and to their forces, who, against seemingly hopeless odds, did, with magnificent courage, attack and drive back the first hostile stroke and make later successes possible.

What "later successes" he referred to, whether they have already been won or are even now in the making, was not disclosed here.

Navy in Full Action.

The Vandegrift message, coupled with previous reports, showed that at least five admirals were in the battle area, and probably in the action itself. Rear Admiral Norman Scott, like Callaghan, was killed in action. The other two mentioned by Vandegrift were identified by the Navy as Willis August Lee, of Oventon, Ky., and Thomas C. Kinkaid, of Philadelphia. The fifth rear admiral was Kelly Turner, who commanded a task force which took part in the battle.

The presence of these high ranking officers and possibly of others gave a clue to the size of the American forces in the main encounter off the Solomons, which was fought out in the early darkness of last Friday (Guadalcanal time) with the United States battleships in full action for the first time since the Spanish-American War.

The fact that Rear Admiral Scott had been killed was disclosed by the Navy today along with the death in action of Captain Cassin Young, captain of the flagship of Rear Admiral Callaghan, whose death had been reported yesterday.

Scott, 53, was from Kirkwood, Mo., and Young, 48, had recently made his home in Coronado, Cal. Young held the medal of honor for exceptional bravery at Pearl Harbor, during the Japanese attack December 7. He was blown off his ship by a terrific explosion in the burning battleship Arizona, tied up alongside, but swam back, climbed aboard and moved his vessel out of a sea of flaming oil to safety.

Starting with Navy Secretary Knox's press conference this morning estimates of the effect of the battle on the course of the war in the Pacific came from many quarters and were in general agreement that the Japanese had been dealt a devastating blow which would make it more difficult for them to undertake any new adventure, although they still have enough naval strength left to try again for the southeastern Solomons if they are willing to take that risk.

Warning From Knox.
Knox said the engagement was a "major action, but not a decisive one." He declared that it ended "round 2" of the Solomons campaign and cautioned that this meant there might be a round 3.

The wave of optimism over the triumph was matched by the praise and enthusiasm shown on the part of the high command for the men and officers who had won it.

Knox declared that "they not only met and drove from the field a numerically superior force, but employed the most daring type of action to accomplish that result."

The secretary mentioned by name Admiral Nimitz, the Pacific fleet commander, Vice Admiral Halsey, widely known as an exponent of the principle of attack, who commands in the South Pacific, and Rear Admiral Callaghan. The deaths of Scott and Young had not been announced when the secretary met with the press.

Messages Released.

Later in the day, the Navy Department released messages of congratulations from Admiral King, fleet commander in chief, Admiral Nimitz, and Rear Admiral Turner at the same time a message from Vandegrift was made public.

"Well done," wired King, "from all here to all participants. Army, Navy and Marine Corps, for the repelling of a powerful attack by determined enemy."

"The names of Savo, Tulagi and Guadalcanal will live in history as symbols of sacrifice, courage, devotion and tenacity due to your brave and gallant action."

Admiral Nimitz told the American forces that their offensive spirit was magnificent and their losses "were not in vain."

Admiral Turner told the men of his task force that "no medals can possibly do the alive and the dead adequate honor."

He disclosed that some of the American forces who took part in the action had arrived in the Guadalcanal area just previously with reinforcements and the troops there and he said that having successfully accomplished this mission these forces "then magnificently and with eagerness became the sharp edge of the sword which cut the enemy's throat."

Americans in Control.

Knox tempered his optimism as to the results of the victory with the statement that "the only safe assumption is that the Japanese will come back," and added "that's exactly what we're making our plans for."

But he said the losses the Japanese have suffered would make it much more difficult for them to organize a new attack and meanwhile American forces have been left in complete control of the positions on Guadalcanal and of Unoccupied France at Vichy. Darlan was repeatedly condemned as a collaborator. On one occasion, after Darlan had visited Hitler at Berchtesgaden, Secretary Hull forthrightly denounced him and linked his name with that of Pierre Laval, top man at Vichy, who was outrightly working for an Axis victory.

When American and British troops moved into North Africa, Darlan was at Algiers. He was taken captive. After negotiations conducted by American military leaders, Darlan ordered all French resistance stopped.

Fighting French and other quarters showed anxiety lest a "Vichy regime" be set up in North Africa. Mr. Roosevelt's statement of today was obviously drafted to reassure these critics. And after reading it, he remarked that it cut the ground from under those who had criticized without thinking the situation through.

The "expedient" adopted, Mr. Roosevelt observed, had already accomplished the dual objective of saving lives—British, American and French lives—and time. He went on to his statement that a "mopping up" period had been avoided.

der way and joined the column of warships.

"We steamed out and prepared to repel the enemy attack. But apparently the Japs were intercepted by our fighter aircraft at Henderson Field, for they never arrived and we received the all-clear at 12:25 p. m."

The transport then returned close inshore and resumed unloading.

All through the daylight landing operations we were under a protective wing set up by our fighter plane patrols from Henderson Field—the one the Japs built for their own use on Guadalcanal. At night time we were protected by two swift, deadly torpedo boats.

They both did a good job, and reconnaissance by the Navy's PBV planes and the Army's Lockheed Hudsons and B-17s also rendered invaluable aid.

Fight-French Approve U.S. View on Darlan

Receive Comment of Roosevelt With Gratification.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Fighting French spokesmen said tonight they received "with gratification" President Roosevelt's statement that the United States Army's political agreement with Admiral Jean Darlan in North Africa was only a temporary expedient dictated by the stress of battle.

"We hoped and believed that that was the situation," one French source said. "Our statement yesterday was an effort to lift the bewilderment and consternation among Frenchmen regarding the arrangement with Darlan. We never have doubted the good faith of Americans."

The Fighting Frenchmen of General Charles de Gaulle openly expressed their opposition to Admiral Darlan, erstwhile Vichy leader, yesterday in a statement which made it clear that the Fighting French were not participating in the political discussions in North Africa.

The British Press Association's diplomatic correspondent had said earlier tonight that the reasons why Lieutenant General Dwight D. Eisenhower recognized Admiral Darlan probably would be disclosed in Washington and "may well be of sensational interest."

But the full story probably will not be told until a military decision has been reached in Tunisia, the correspondent said, indicating that military considerations of prime importance were behind the present American collaboration with the Frenchman who for many months in Vichy worked with the Nazis.

The Fighting French said that President Roosevelt's statement was "a step forward in the clarification" of a muddled situation, and that the President's request for the liberation of all persons in North Africa imprisoned because they opposed Nazi efforts to dominate the world means 10,000 de Gaulles prisoners, we are especially pleased."

The spokesman said that many had been jailed there after their arrival in an attempt to join the Fighting French.

College President Gets New Position

Appointment of George H. King, president of Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College, as director of the South Georgia Coastal Plain Experiment Station was announced yesterday by Chancellor S. V. Sanford, of the State University System.

King will continue to serve as president of the college, a post he has held for eight years, and will succeed the late S. H. Starr as director of the experiment station. The college and station are both located at Tifton. Sanford said King will draw a $5,000-a-year salary paid the station director, getting an increase of $1,000.

OPA Reduces Gas Ration to Three Gallons

the east coast, intensified by military requirements.

On Capitol Hill, Representative Johnson, Democrat, Oklahoma, said a score of congressmen had assured him they would support his resolution to set up a three-man board to study the entire petroleum situation. Johnson's resolution, if adopted, automatically would forestall nationwide application of gasoline rationing for three months to give the board a chance to complete a survey.

Ever since the plan for nationwide rationing of gasoline was announced, representatives from the west, midwest and some from the south have protested it would unnecessarily inconvenience motorists in areas where oil supplies are plentiful.

President Roosevelt told his press conference today he had no views to express on the congressional demands for postponement of nationwide gasoline rationing, but said he expected to talk later this week with William M. Jeffers, the government's rubber administrator.

Meanwhile the Federal Bureau of Investigation was reported checking rumors current in Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago and other midwestern cities that gasoline rationing would be postponed, perhaps indefinitely.

The Cleveland regional office of the Office of War Information said the investigation was disclosed by "highest officials" of the OPA, who flatly denied there would be a further delay in starting the rationing program.

President Roosevelt's Talk On Arrangement With Darlan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—The following is the text of President Roosevelt's statement today on the political arrangements made by Lieutenant Dwight D. Eisenhower in North Africa:

"I have accepted General Eisenhower's political arrangements made for the time being in North Africa and Western Africa. I thoroughly understand and approve the feeling in the United States and Great Britain and among all the other United Nations that in view of the history of the past two years no permanent arrangement should be made with Admiral Darlan. People in the United Nations likewise would never understand the recognition of a reconstituting of the Vichy government in France or in any French territory."

"We are opposed to Frenchmen who support Hitler and the Axis. No one in our Army has any authority to discuss the future government of France and the French empire."

"The future French government will be established—not by any individual in metropolitan France or overseas—but by the French people themselves after they have been set free by the victory of the United Nations."

"The present temporary arrangement in North and West Africa is only a temporary expedient, justified solely by the stress of battle."

"The present temporary arrangement has accomplished two military objectives. The first was to save American and British lives on the one hand, and French lives on the other hand."

"The second was the vital factor of time. The temporary arrangement has made it possible to avoid a 'mopping up' period in Algiers and Morocco which might have taken a month or two to consummate. Such a period would have delayed the concentration for the attack from the west on Tunis, and we hope on Tripoli."

"Every day of delay in the current operation would have enabled the Germans and Italians to build up a strong resistance, to dig in and make a huge operation on our part essential before we could win."

"Again, many more lives will be saved under the present speedy offensive than if we had had to delay it for a month or more."

"It will also be noted that French troops, under the command of General Giraud, have already been in action against the enemy in Tunisia, fighting by the side of American and British soldiers for the liberation of their country."

"Admiral Darlan's proclamation assisted in making a 'mopping up' period unnecessary. Temporary arrangements made with Admiral Darlan apply, without exception, to the current local situation only. I have requested the liberation of all persons in Northern Africa who had been imprisoned because they opposed the efforts of the Nazis to dominate the world, and I have asked for the abrogation of all laws and decrees inspired by Nazi governments or Nazi ideologists. Reports indicate that the French of North Africa are subordinating all political questions to the formation of a common front against the common enemy."

ATLANTA, GA., NOVEMBER 18, 1942.

On Two Fronts

The good news from the southern Solomons comes at exactly the right time. For it brings assurance that we are able to handle both our enemies, take care of the European fight against Nazi Germany and the Pacific struggle against the Japanese at the same time.

Neither the successful occupation of North Africa nor the great naval victory around Gaudalcanal, however, should be taken for anything more than what they are; that is, merely steps toward the greater strategy of complete victory to come. Good and satisfactory steps, to be sure, but by no means decisive.

The great gain of the African success will be, when it is complete, that we shall have a place from which we can strike increasingly telling blows against the Axis in Europe. It takes the initiative out of the hands of Hitler and gives it to us. No longer must we wait, wondering where the next German blow will fall. It is Hitler's turn to sit on the anxious seat, wondering where next we shall strike against him.

In the Solomons, the victory gives us control of the waters in that area, for the time being, at least. After suffering the crippling losses the Japs have suffered, it is unlikely they will be able to attack there, at least in the near future. While we hold Gaudalcanal, our lifelines of supply to Australia are reasonably safe.

This means we can steadily proceed with the preparation of that great offensive which will, ultimately, reach the home territory of Japan. Incidentally, if we are to effectively remove the Japanese menace, we must land our troops on Japan proper and march in victory through the streets of Tokyo and other Japanese cities. The Japanese hold a firm religious belief that no foreign enemy can ever set foot upon their shores. Unless we prove the falsity of this, they will feel more secure than ever and, in a few years after peace, begin preparing anew for another armed assault on the Occidental world. There must be no premature peace with either of the great enemies, not though they come begging for armistice, least of all with Japan.

We have, within the week, heard the best news of the war, to date, from both the great battle areas.

We must not permit over-optimism to lessen our efforts, nor render us less able, in morale, to take the setbacks which, inevitably, are yet to come.

Yet the news of the week does, at least, give encouraging glimpse of the pattern of victory which, in the final telling, will be ours.

Growing USO

The fact that contributions to the USO War Fund have now reached a total of more than $27,750,000 not only speaks well for the generosity of the American people and their willingness to help the boys in service, but proves conclusively the public realizes the new demands for service being made on the USO due to the ever-expanding Army.

As for the USO itself, growth of that organization is seen in reports which show there are now more than a thousand USO units in more than 500 cities and towns, in 47 states and 16 territories and possessions where there are off-shore bases. Units are being added weekly, and there is a keen demand for broadening the scope of service.

These demands will be met, it goes without saying, as the USO moves forward in the task of aiding morale and physical well-being of the boys in service. All of which should make those who contribute to the fund feel mighty fine.

Women at Peace Table?

It is quite possible that women delegates may sit around the peace table when victory has been won and the Axis criminals have been beaten into the dust. Why not?

Senora Anna Amelia de Quieroz Carneiro de Mendoca, of Brazil, a member of the Inter-American Commission of Women at the recent meeting in Washington of the Pan-American Union, put it well when she explained she felt the intuition and deep sympathy of women are needed in reconstructing the world after the war, and they are needed as correlaries to masculine intellectuality.

Senora de Mendoca offered her idea in a resolution, which resulted in 12 women representatives of American republics pledging themselves to petition their governments for the appointment of women delegates at the peace table. This is a sound idea, and one in which many men will agree. It has more advantages than disadvantages, in so far as the postwar period is concerned.

Whatever became of that Kansas dust bowl? The answer won't bring any tears—the pesky thing's gone. That national agrarian blight of the middle thirties is extinct once more, and it's earnestly to be wished it will stay away for good.

Out Kansas way, folks conceded months ago the dust bowl was washed out. But now it's official. The Kansas state department of agriculture came through with solemn words in a report that noted the dust bowl's disappearance.

Just for the record, the report put it like this: "Wind erosion scars have healed to the extent that the part of the state worst afflicted has now produced nearly half of the second largest wheat crop in Kansas history."

Important Campaign

It is advantageous to American public appraisal of the war situation all around the world, that General Douglas MacArthur and other top American and Australian leaders have gone to the fighting front before Buna, in New Guinea. The presence of these generals will serve to drive home to the public the importance of this fighting front which has been somewhat overshadowed in news and comment by the more spectacular developments in North Africa and the Solomon Islands.

The American and Australian forces which have fought their way across the Owen Stanley mountains have faced probably the toughest problem on all the current fighting fronts. The terrain, mountainous jungle, could not be more difficult. It is tropical land, with all the heat, the insect pests and other natural jungle dangers added to a determined and unscrupulous foe, the Jap.

That these forces have driven through until they are within gunshot of Buna is one of the miracles of the war. Not all the vaunted success of the Japanese themselves in fighting and infiltrating to temporary victory in Malaya and Burma was any more remarkable than that of our own and the Australian troops in New Guinea.

If, as now appears probable, we succeed in capturing the Japanese base at Buna, we shall have removed what has been, perhaps, the greatest threat to the Australian mainland. The Japanese, of course, wanted to capture Port Moresby and make this the jumping off place for their contemplated invasion of Australia. Their failure in that attempt was the first genuine setback they had experienced in land fighting.

Now, if we can clear them entirely out of New Guinea by capturing their main base there, Buna, we shall, for the present at least, have removed the threat to Australia. Victory in New Guinea, combined with our successful holding of Gaudalcanal, would assure our defense of Australia and provide us with the first step of the successive advances across the Pacific which must, eventually, carry us to Japan proper.

Georgia Editors Say:

"ARMY OF TEN MILLION"

(From The Lanier County News.)
No man knows exactly how many millions will eventually get into that Army—and Navy. An Army of 10,000,000 men may be necessary to win this thing, and then again we may need but half that figure. The draft call for the first part of this month has been delayed, locally, and it is understood that is true for the entire state. From all indications, men are coming in so fast now to the armed forces that the authorities are having a hard time taking care of them. Soldiers "waiting to be assigned" are numerous all over the country.

Remember this: An Army of 4,000,000 at the front needs a host of twenty or thirty millions behind them, keeping the supplies rolling. An Army of 8,000,000 needs 60,000,000 behind the lines. So we can see if we put more than ten millions in the fields, that would take quite some supplying.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

DANIELS' PROPOSAL WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—No more timely suggestion has come forward in a long while than the proposal of former Secretary of the Navy Joseph Daniels that we adopt a constitutional amendment removing the requirement that treaties be ratified by a two-thirds majority of the senate.

As one of our elder statesmen, Mr. Daniels has hit upon an idea that may have far-reaching effects on the problem of post-war adjustment.

What he is seeking to avoid is a repetition of the political conviving that permitted a small band of senate irreconcilables to scuttle the League of Nations protocol after the last World War and pave the way for the world conflict that is now upon us.

No one can say that the present war might not have been avoided if the League of Nations had been adopted by the leading world powers of the time and its concepts rigidly adhered to. Germany would have never been allowed to rear in the first place, and her early aggressions would have been stamped out by an international concert of nations.

The League failed chiefly because it was rejected by its sponsor nation, the United States. When President Wilson, who fathered the idealistic scheme, was unable to secure its adoption by the American senate, the other nations allowed it to languish and fall.

THAT LITTLE BAND It failed in the United States senate because of the last-ditch opposition of a little band of "willful men." As Mr. Wilson described them, who were able to exercise a veto power over the majority by virtue of an archaic provision in the constitution.

Mr. Daniels, the former ambassador to Mexico and editor of one of the south's leading newspapers—Raleigh News and Observer—would correct the evil by changing the constitution to permit ratification of treaties by a simple majority of the house and senate. At present the senate only acts and the provision gives a veto power to one-third of that body.

The end of the war is to rise to some new scheme for enforcing world peace. Already the master minds of the Allied Nations are applying themselves to the task. Whatever program is worked out will probably involve the United States taking its place at the side of other leading nations of the world in seeing that no new war criminals are lost in history. For a time it may be necessary for the United States, Great Britain and Russia, in concert with other peace-loving peoples of the world, to assume leadership in organizing an international police force.

Any program that is worked out will, it seems, take the form of a treaty which must be ratified by a two-thirds majority of the senate—unless the Daniels proposal is accepted in the meantime.

STILL ISOLATIONISTS Within the precincts of that august body there is still a dormant isolationist sentiment that is waiting for a proper moment to be aroused. It slumbers now only for the reason that it does not rear its head while the country is engaged in a life-and-death war struggle. But, once the war is over, the same old isolationist elements may be expected to come forward again with demands that we wash our hands of world responsibilities.

The recent election failed to thin them out to any considerable degree. The Ham Fishes and other of his ilk will still be there in the new congress, which sits until 1945. They were the chief agitators behind the passage of the neutrality act and other measures of the pre-war era which reflected an illusory hope that somehow and in some way we would be able to draw within our shell and watch the rest of the world go by.

THE LEADING POWER If victory in the present struggle is won by the Allied Nations, the leading power of the world will not be one of the subjects taught and, on the contrary, atheism and contempt for religion would be. In our country there would be great trouble over this subject of religious teaching in the public institutions. Having no established state religion, and the establishment of such being forbidden, we would have no agreement on the religion to be taught if we were to permit such teaching at all. And there would be some who would insist that no public institution of ours had any right to concern itself at all with religious instruction.

It is not merely sentimental to insist that there is no state substitute for the influence of the mother on her children. The state institutions would be not necessarily harsh or cold and they might, indeed, be warmer, brighter and more interesting than the homes of many of their individual little clients, but they would be impersonal in their atmosphere. These would be institutions for children, ignorant of the influence of motherhood, knowing nothing about home.

Why is it necessary, anyway, that this nation, with its machinery and marvelous productive ability, produce twice as much of everything by doubling the man power by using a.1 or all but a few women for such work in the great world of the future? Aren't there men enough to do it or aren't there men enough, the whole lot of them, to do with the surplus, remembering, incidentally, that Mr. Wallace himself found that our trouble once was not too little but too much?

There are those in Washington and in positions of influence, too, who appear to think of the whole state, the nation, the American people, as one great ever-loving family together. But there are others who believe this is too large a group for good family purposes and hold out for the home and the family as they have always been before.

Democracy has come to have familiar and alarming meanings. Americans came to love the word as meaning personal freedom and justice in the other war, but some of the advocates of the newer and, by most of the people, unsuspected meanings, are making it a word to be feared.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Again, The "Contemptibles."

Webster's dictionary says the word "contemptible" as a noun is obsolete. Somehow I doubt very much if Hitler, Mussolini and all their fellow rogues would agree with that.

You have been reading of the combined American and British advances in North Africa. You have read about the troops, under General K. A. N. Anderson, who are pushing ahead to take Bizerte, that most important base, strategically, of all along the African coast. And you have noticed, I hope, that the British under his command consist of the British First Army.

The British First Army. The dear old Contemptibles. It is typical of British love for paradox that they should have named it a derogatory adverb, made it into a noun and adopted it as synonymous for some of the greatest glory ever won by British arms.

It Was In 1914.

It was in 1914, soon after Germany had thrown Europe into the horror of the first World War. The Germans had torn their treaty with Belgium up, with the scornful sneer of national honor, that it was but "a scrap of paper."

The German hordes of faceless men were pouring over the frontier into Belgium. Britain, then as in 1939, was ill prepared for war. Her fleet was strong and ready. But her army numbered but a handful compared to the millions of German troops. Not over 100,000.

Britain, though, had a treaty with Belgium, too. And to the British people a treaty is far more than a scrap of paper. It is an obligation of honor, which cannot be broken save at the price of lasting shame. The British treaty with Belgium called for the protection of the little country if it should ever be willfully and basely attacked.

So, the British First Army of that day, the little handful of 100,000 or less, moved across the channel and marched up into Belgium to fulfill, as best it might, its nation's obligation, its nation's pledge of honor.

And Kaiser Wilhelm, exultant in confidence in his tremendous war machine—just as Hitler was to be 25 years later—laughed in scorn at the little British army, and spoke of it as "that contemptible little force."

But the British marched on and at Mons taught the Germans there was nothing contemptible about the British soldier, individually or as an army.

Most of those first "Contemptibles" died. It was they who held the line in France, while Britain organized her armies, new war strength. They were the forlorn hope, the men who knew they had to stand until they were dead, to snatch every precious minute for preparation of those to come and take their place.

And, from those early days of the first World War, the name, "The Contemptibles" has been one of the proudest heritages of Britain's First Army.

Today another British First Army, successors to the men who fought and died at Mons, are forcing their way across the desert trails into Tunisia, advancing upon Bizerte and headed for Tripoli, beyond.

They will go into battle, as they meet the foe, proud that they are the "Contemptibles" of 1942. "The Contemptibles," yes. But not contemptible any more, even in the mind of an enemy. For Hitler and his followers are jittery. They know their doom is jittery. They know there can be but one outcome of the fighting now closing in Tunisia.

Adolf, the "Contemptibles" are marching, once again. This time not as forlorn hope, but as spearhead of a mighty army which is now gathering to sweep you and your kind into eternal oblivion.

First in Africa, then in Europe, until the Contemptibles and their American and Russian allies shall march down Unter den Linden in triumph.

Panzer and Luftwaffe and Storm Troopers and Elite Guards and Death's Head Gestapo will all alike be powerless to save you then, Adolf.

And, if there be room for laughter in the tragic business of war, there is surely a satiric joke in the thought of the British Contemptibles meeting, in battle, the ex-invincible legions of the jittering jackal, Benny the Muss.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Sunday, November 18, 1917:

"With the American Army in France, November 17.—(By The Associated Press.)—The artillery fighting in the sector held by American troops has become even more lively and there have been further casualties, shrapnel wounding some men in the trenches."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Friday, November 18, 1892:

"The bill by Mr. Fleming, of Richmond, providing for the acceptance of the Confederate veteran soldiers' home by the state was read a second time in the house yesterday."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PÉGLER.

Women At Work NEW YORK, Nov. 17. Let us waive for the moment the fact that it is mentioned nowhere in either the Declaration of Independence or the Constitution and consider the meaning of that phase of democracy which Vice President Henry Wallace advocated recently as democracy between the sexes. He pointed out that Russia makes great use of the physical, industrial power of women as workers and yearned for a similar condition here, not only in time of war, when it is necessary to get things done by any hands that are able to do them, but permanently.

Mr. Wallace did not elaborate, but it seems plain that if, as a permanent condition, women are to be used equally with men in the tasks, light and hard, of a great industrial nation such as ours is, then the substitute must be found for the home. A woman cannot keep the home together, minding and teaching the children, if she and her husband both go swinging off to work together in the morning, and she goes in a full day in the factory. By night she is as tired as he is and not able to catch up on the responsibilities of motherhood and, moreover, by that time, it is too late. The children have been into all kinds of mischief and are running wild. As long as the husband and wife continue to live together in the married state, this would not be called a broken home, but practically it would be a broken home and criminologists are always telling us that a high percentage of those who get into trouble with the law are the victims of the disruption of the home.

Assuming that men and women are equal in numbers and equally employed, there would be no American home. It would disappear from our scheme of life and substitute would have to be found.

Russian Substitute

The substitute in Russia has been state institutions, parking lots or checkrooms, in which the young ones are left by the day. Lacking reliable, detailed information, we may assume that the Russian government does undertake to keep them out of mischief and probably with fair success, and that they are put through courses of education. However, in Russia, religion would not be one of the subjects taught and, on the contrary, atheism and contempt for religion would be. In our country there would be great trouble over this subject of religious teaching in the public institutions. Having no established state religion, and the establishment of such being forbidden, we would have no agreement on the religion to be taught if we were to permit such teaching at all. And there would be some who would insist that no public institution of ours had any right to concern itself at all with religious instruction.

It is not merely sentimental to insist that there is no state substitute for the influence of the mother on her children. The state institutions would be not necessarily harsh or cold and they might, indeed, be warmer, brighter and more interesting than the homes of many of their individual little clients, but they would be impersonal in their atmosphere. These would be institutions for children, ignorant of the influence of motherhood, knowing nothing about home.

Making It Fearsome

Why is it necessary, anyway, that this nation, with its machinery and marvelous productive ability, produce twice as much of everything by doubling the man power by using a.1 or all but a few women for such work in the great world of the future? Aren't there men enough to do it or aren't there men enough, the whole lot of them, to do with the surplus, remembering, incidentally, that Mr. Wallace himself found that our trouble once was not too little but too much?

There are those in Washington and in positions of influence, too, who appear to think of the whole state, the nation, the American people, as one great ever-loving family together. But there are others who believe this is too large a group for good family purposes and hold out for the home and the family as they have always been before.

Democracy has come to have familiar and alarming meanings. Americans came to love the word as meaning personal freedom and justice in the other war, but some of the advocates of the newer and, by most of the people, unsuspected meanings, are making it a word to be feared.

Word Stories

By W. Worthington Wells.

Claude A. Jagger, financial editor for the Associated Press, says: "It is difficult for the layman to understand how nations wallowing in debt, with budgets unbalanced, gold reserves depleted and currencies DEPRECIATED can pay the fantastic costs of war."

DEPRECIATE

Depreciate is a verb pronounced de-PRĒ-ci-ate with the accent on the second syllable. (prĒ) which rhymes with tree. The first syllable (de) rhymes with me, and (ci) sounds like (she). The last syllable rhymes with date.

Depreciate means to lose value as from age, wear, or change of styles. Perishable food, depreciates rapidly. A poor grade of paint will depreciate more rapidly than a good grade of paint. The market value of new automobiles depreciates regardless of whether they are used because new models are released every year.

Depreciate also means to disparage, to treat with disrespect, speak slightly of, push aside, or detract from the value of.

He modestly depreciated the value of his paintings. We should beware of those who depreciate the value of our free institutions.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

SEE HERE, PRIVATE McRAE One of the finest, quietest young men we had around The Constitution was Tom McRae, of McRae, Ga.

He was turned down early in the selective service because of his eyes. They took him in a few months ago.

I have had a letter from him, apologizing for borrowing a book four years ago and returning it after being inducted. He was a great reader, with the old-fashioned morning newspaper habit of staying up until 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning and sleeping until noon.

He was, of course, horrified at having to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning.

His letter inspired me to think, "See here, now, Private McRae, what about those eyes?" Because his letter reveals that despite glasses he was one of four men in his company, 328 men, to qualify as an expert rifleman.

"I never did quite learn how to hold my rifle, for my lip took an awful beating. I would shoot and spit blood, but being liver-lipped for a few days was a small price to pay for one of those beautiful medals. I was appalled at my vanity. When the company commander gave me a medal I am sure I experienced an emotion as great as Lieutenant O'Hare when the President gave him the Congressional Medal."

His letter also reveals that he had a 49 out of a possible 50 in his qualifying round, rapid fire, from a sitting position. That is good shooting, the sitting position not being an easy one.

WORK TO DO For mothers who might be interested in what their sons may have to do, in addition to soldiering, I think Mr. McRae's letter may be of additional interest.

"So far, the details I've caught haven't been so bad. The first time on K. P., the mess sergeant had me cleaning a doughnut machine, which was the dirtiest thing I've seen in the Army except some few of its personnel. Due to my ignorance and awkwardness, I was soon bleeding about the fingers. I didn't know steel wool was such a vicious cleaning material. At the sight of the blood, I exclaimed proudly that I'd already begun to bleed for the four freedoms, but added as an afterthought, that I trusted it would be the last time."

(If your son does not have a sense of humor, try to get him one. It's a great help in the Army—as well as elsewhere.)

"I also had the distinction of helping clean up the general's headquarters the day he showed up. I was wielding a mop, and very proficiently, too, at the time I didn't know whether to drop the mop and salute, or bring the mop to present arms. They solved it for me by not entering."

"Most of the men here at — are from the east and have strange names, like Zampetti, Zanucki, Zamboski, Plaskowski, Raccaggio, and so on. I had not realized they also were Americans until I got here. I live in a tent with a Jew from Philadelphia, and Irishman named O'Riley from Long Island, an Italian from New Haven, a German from Iowa, and a Swede from Minnesota. It's good for the mind. And for Americans."

Mr. McRae is fortunate to be under a tough sergeant, with an Army vocabulary gleaned from 27 years in the Army.

"For several weeks I've been attending the supply and administration school. I don't know if this means I'll do office work or not. The soldiers in this school are known to the truck drivers, blacksmiths, welders, mechanics, motorcycle riders, etc., as 'those pencil-pushing'."

Private McRae has done his share of digging ditches, trenches, fox holes, and has also learned to march 12 miles in four hours.

THIS MAN'S ARMY We are proud of our Private McRae, as we are of the almost 100 men who have gone from The Constitution.

I publish parts of his letter because of this fact, and also because I get so many letters from mothers saying their son has always been a good boy with a liking for books and they are fearful of what the Army will do for him.

Tom McRae used to average reading about a book and a half a day. He was a quiet, modest, but capable young man, whom everyone liked and respected—one of the very best.

He tried to get into a number of things, but his eyes kept him out of everything, including the draft, until the restrictions were modified.

I hope he will not mind my making his letter an answer to the fearful mothers who write in for advice and assistance.

The Army will be good for them—if their mothers haven't ruined them beyond redemption.

A sense of humor is invaluable.

That asset can make the work jobs seem funny, and ease the weariness caused by marching 24 miles a day and digging a few ditches.

There is a lot of difference—if one is sent to clean the doughnut machine, in regarding skinned fingers as bleeding for the four freedoms, rather than viewing the whole job as depressing, unfair, harsh treatment which makes one hate the Army.

Take along a sense of humor.

Jordan, Helms Punt Brilliantly In Jacket Drill

Great Play of Stein Against Tide Went Unheralded.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.
Georgia Tech's No. 1 football team took it easy again yesterday while the second and third-stringers battled it out against the freshmen in the first scrimmage of the week.

The boys who saw the most service against Alabama were on the field but were dressed in sweat clothes. Most of them are still stiff and sore and Wilbur Stein was hobbling on a bad ankle. But all will be ready for the Jackets' game with Florida Saturday at Grant Field.

STEIN STARRED.

Incidentally, the play of Wilbur Stein at backing up the line with Mutt Manning against the Crimson Tide has gone almost unnoticed in the confusion after the game. But he played more than 50 minutes of the contest on a foot which has been bothering him for a couple of weeks. And he did a swell job, too. His blocking was good but it was on defense that he really stood out.

Although they are heavy favorites over the Gators, the Yellow Jackets are taking no chances on having their undefeated record marred. There was plenty of pep and enthusiasm during the work-out and the reserves did a good job of stopping Florida's plays.

On offense, Eddie Prokop ran well as did Rabbit Jordan after receiving passes and on an occasional end around play. But it was in the punting department that Jordan really stood out.

JORDAN BOOTS.

The Rabbit did most of the kicking in the Alabama game and kept up his good work in a punting session before practice. With a slight breeze at his back, it was seldom that one of his boots traveled less than 60 yards.

Jack Helms, who missed the Tide game with a back injury, also showed he has lost none of his punting touch. He will be ready to go against Florida.

The Jackets are scheduled for another scrimmage today but it is unlikely the first-stringers will get into it.

Gators Prepare For Tech Fray

GAINEVILLE, Fla., Nov. 17.—(AP)—Florida's Gators turned to offensive drills today as they bore down on preparations for the clash at Atlanta Saturday with the mighty Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech.

Tomorrow they will take a look at some of Tech's tricky formations in a hope they can put up a creditable showing in the game, final one of the season.

One of the standbys, Quarterback George Sutherland, will be out of the contest from a broken shoulder received in last week's losing tussle with Miami. Otherwise, the team is in good shape, Coach Tom Lieb assured.

The Gators have taken a lot of buffeting this year. After dropping the opener to the Jacksonville Naval Air Station, they beat Randolph-Macon, Tampa and Auburn and then were trounced by Villanova, Mississippi State, Maryland, Georgia and Miami.

All in the Game

By JACK TROY

"Wally" Worries Coach Wallace Butts laughed hollowly when, during a phone conversation yesterday, Ralph McGill whispered, "Ask him when he's leaving for the Rose Bowl."

"Tell him please not to hex us. All I know about bowls is what I read in the papers. We're playing in a bowl at Columbus Saturday—at the Auburn T party," Butts responded.

"And then there's Georgia Tech the following week. If we lose to Auburn there isn't going to be any bowl for us."

Georgia is doing as much work as possible this week, but Butts said that the rough work was being held to a minimum.

"I just don't know what we're going to do for quarter-backs. Keuper can't play. And Todd is barely able to run," Butts added.

The way Butts is talking may be a forecast of ill tidings for Coach Jack Meagher's unpredictable Plainsmen.

There is nothing wrong with the Bulldog line, and Sinkwich, Trippi, Maguire, Lloyd, Race Horse Davis, et al., will be ready to play.

The game Saturday at Columbus has received a tremendous boost by Auburn's terrific upset of Louisiana State University last Saturday in Birmingham. Auburn surprised the most ardent followers.

It is sure to be a stand-up sell-out, and, as mentioned from time to time, Alfred Young's only concern comes in the possibility of turning customers away.

Tickets are available now. First come, however, will be first served.

Penalty for Honesty J. M. Huff, of Marietta, has the answer to Mr. Paul Williamson's rating system, we cheerfully admit. Mr. Huff writes—

"Dear Bro. Troy:

"The answer to the Williamson rating system lies in their own statement that Tech, 'while turning in probably the best performance in the country,' slipped to third place. When the team turning in the best performance slides back there is something wrong with the system. Since Williamson is from N. O., it spells 'Sugar Bowl.'"

Of course, Mr. Huff, your correct analysis may cause a lot of people to call you biased, among other things. That's a penalty for being honest—and right.

Unknown Critic An Alabama student who does not sign a name postcards from Tuscaloosa—"You gave the most unspontaneous talk between halves of the Alabama-Georgia Tech football game that I have ever heard, and I have heard quite a few."

All I said, in an interview with Harry Wismer (Blue network), was that Tech, playing superior football, would continue to maintain an evident superiority.

There was praise for Alabama's spirit and fight.

No Day for Ducks Leaving the raging arguments far behind, John Martin, Dick Hawkins (AP) and this correspondent, duck's best friend, descended on Lake Aubrey Monday afternoon. We spent some hours there, and all the ducks that were on the pond when we arrived were there when we left, with the exception of four Scaps and a Coot. They're fast fliers, but they didn't fly quite fast enough.

As it was still bluebird weather in Georgia, there were absolutely no flights. Not even at sundown. We saw two mallards winging their way far overhead as the rays of the red sun died in the west. Martin saw a couple of geese at great distance beating south.

Hawkins and I paddled around the big body of water four times, hoping that the choppy waves might have concealed some isolated flocks. But they simply were not there Monday.

Our section will have to experience rain and some blustery weather before the ducks begin looking for a haven. The moon is getting right for night feeding, and if there is any change this week there is likely to be the best duck shooting of the season.

Martin, hiding in a marshy blind behind four or five bobbing decoys, was a melancholy sight at sundown. He hadn't fired his gun. He hadn't even seen a duck.

I hated to do it, but he has reminded us of it so often in the past that we let him have it.

"Don't fret, John; it's character building," we pointed out.

Tigers Gird To Stop Powerful Bulldog Rush

AUBURN, Ala., Nov. 17.—(AP)—"Georgia can play only four men at a time in the backfield."

With that sweetly solemn thought today, Auburn's football forces went about the job of hobbling the nation's No. 1 gridiron power—unbeaten, untied Georgia.

It was no news to Coach Jack Meagher and his Tigers that Georgia would put both Frankie Sinkwich and his sophomore understudy, Charlie Trippi, in the same backfield at Columbus, Ga., Saturday. They've expected it.

That Auburn can stop Georgia—something nine other teams have failed to do—is just an academic question here with every one but Meagher. Big city posters may figure Auburn hasn't a chance, but on Main street, Auburn, they believe in the Tigers—and the Tigers often prove them right.

"We have a good football team over here," said Meagher, cautiously. "We just haven't won so many. If you study the games, you'll see that a number of them might have gone the other way."

"Football is a funny business," he added. "Any team is likely to knock off another—although super-teams like Georgia and Georgia Tech usually win every Saturday. I don't look for an upset—but we'll be in there pitching."

Traditionally a fast-finishing team, Auburn dizzied the experts last weekend by upsetting powerful Louisiana State, the prohibitive pre-game favorite, by a decisive 25-7. Last year in the final game Auburn scored a similar stunner by whipping Clemson.

Georgia, B. C. Picked To Win By Williamson

Bulldogs Expected To Encounter Trouble in Traditional Game.

By PAUL B. WILLIAMSON.

There will be fewer games than usual this week, because a lot of the teams are resting for Thanksgiving week battles. Most of the games, too, are of the nature of "loose ends." There are relatively few outstanding games and ones in which there is very much at stake from national and conference standpoints. On the other hand, some dozen contests are traditional grudge affairs between opponents who have been at each other, hammer and tongs, for many years.

What are probably the two biggest encounters of the week involve those spotlighters of this season: Michigan, Ohio State, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

A battle royal will be fought in Columbus, Ohio, when Coach Paul Brown's surprising Buckeyes of Ohio State, entertain Walker Crisler's Wolverines of Michigan. The game has an important bearing on this year's championship of the Western Conference. The System picked Michigan last week over Notre Dame against consensus and was right. Probably also against consensus, the System favors Michigan again this week.

The Golden Gophers, of Minnesota, have been in-and-outers this season. Wisconsin's Badgers have had their most successful season in years, losing only to Iowa in an upset by 6-0. Although the Gophers came back strong last week to whittle Iowa to the tune of 27-7, still the System sticks by its ratings and picks Wisconsin this Saturday.

Georgia and Boston College, currently No. 1 and 2 in the Williamson National Ratings, apparently have a hickup Saturday against Auburn and Boston U. respectively. According to a rule-of-thumb comparison of the ratings Georgia should take Auburn by three touchdowns and Boston College should run away with Boston U. by a margin of something like 50 points. At any rate, it will be very inconsistent for the System to do anything but pick Georgia and Boston College.

It must be remembered, however, that the first intercollegiate football game played in the deep south was that between Auburn and Georgia in 1889. Ever since then the Bulldogs of Georgia and the Tigers of Auburn have looked on their annual meeting as one of their battles of the year.

Several times one of these teams was headed for championship, but lost to a currently indifferent team of the other. It looks like Frankie Sinkwich and Company should be too much for the Tigers this year, but that company may have to tend themselves to win. Some sports writer remarked this year that Coach Jack Meagher's Auburn outfit, year in and year out, lost more games it shouldn't than won more games it shouldn't than any other team in the nation.

Rickey To Decide On Leo Thursday

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Branch Rickey and Leo Durocher wrestled vocally for eight hours today over the management of the Brooklyn Dodgers and at the end of the club's new president announced that he would reveal definitely on Thursday afternoon whether Durocher would return as pilot in 1943.

The conference brought together two eloquent conversationalists—Rickey the orator and Leo the Lip. The pair met for breakfast at 7:30 this morning and finished in a draw in mid-afternoon with only momentary interruptions in between.

Golfer Bags Duck With Pet Putter

CHESTERTOWN, Md., Nov. 17.—(AP)—Some people get birdies and eagles on a golf course, but Jimmie Kirby got a duck. Kirby was getting set for a putt at the Chester River Country Club course when he noticed a low-flying duck. He let fly with his putter, and knocked the bird down.

TRIPLE-THREAT TRIPPI—And he can do all three nearly as well as his more famous teammate, Frankie Sinkwich. It perhaps is not well known, but Charlie Trippi, Georgia tailback who subs for Sinkwich, has an excellent passing average this year. Here he shows how he gripped the ball to sling 23 good ones out of 45 heaves—for a total of 452 yards—through the air against Bulldog opponents. The slender (he's six feet, weights 180) lad from Pittston, Pa., has played almost exactly half of the total time of all games.

Georgia and Tech Hold Sinkwich Has To 1-2 Rank in Nation

Much Previous Favoritism for Bulldogs, However, Shifts to Boston College Eagles.

By HAROLD CLAASSEN.
NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Georgia clung to first place in the Associated Press poll to determine the nation's best college football team, although its share of the first-place votes slumped from 76 per cent a week ago to 54 per cent in today's tabulation.

Much of the favoritism formerly shown the southern powerhouse switched to Boston College, but men of Wally Butts' Bulldogs, which cleared one of toughest hurdles in downing Alabama, gained points and respect but also lost first-place votes in the general swing to the Eagles.

STILL PERFECT. All three of the top clubs are being along unbeaten and untied, a situation that may last until the two Georgia eleven-olds in Athens and Boston College meets its arch foe, Holy Cross. The winner of the southern battle and the Eagles have been labelled as prospective foes in the January 1 Sugar Bowl contest.

Michigan, which lived up to early season billing by downing Notre Dame, vaulted from sixth to fourth place while the Irish skidded from fourth to eighth.

Three other Big Ten clubs in rankings to the Wolverines gained places in the first ten, Ohio State grabbed fifth place, Wisconsin seventh and Minnesota tenth.

Tulsa, also unbeaten and untied, swirled into sixth place on the strength of its 24-0 victory over highly rated Baylor, of the Southwest Conference last Saturday.

Although the one-two race of the two Georgia eleven-olds is likely to continue until the final November poll, the struggle for fourth place between Michigan and Ohio State will be decided this Saturday when the two meet at Columbus. Similarly, Wisconsin and Minnesota are rivals this week-end.

TOUGH ROAD AHEAD. Georgia has the toughest task of the three leaders on Saturday, playing Auburn which last week-end was good enough to hand Louisiana State a decisive defeat; Georgia Tech plays Florida and Boston College opposes Boston University, another of its cross town rivals.

McPhee, Todd Back in Action For Bulldogs

McPhee Blocks, Sinkwich at Full as New Back-field Drills Hard.

By F. M. WILLIAMS.

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 17.—Everybody's worried this week about how the Georgia-Georgia Tech game is coming out except the Georgia football team. The Bulldogs are doing their present worrying about Auburn.

Anyone who fears Coach Wallace Butts' club is going into Saturday's forty-seventh renewal of the oldest football rivalry in Dixie overconfident should have visited the practice session held this afternoon on the Bulldog field.

It was a scrimmage, first with passing alone stressed, and later with running plays. And it was one of the finest held this season. It also saw the return to action of Fullbacks Dick McPhee and Jim Todd, which was heartening news to all Georgia supporters. Both will be able to play against the Tiger.

NEW BACKFIELD ROMPS.

But most of all it gave Coach Butts an opportunity to watch his new backfield combination in action for the first time, with Captain Frank Sinkwich running at fullback; Charlie Trippi at tailback; Lamar Davis at wingback and McPhee at blocking back, a position he is due to see service at for the next two games.

Sinkwich looked great running with the ball and Trippi showed considerable improvement in his passing. Once or twice the fireball cut down through the air and he was his usual self.

Auburn's record this year may not be impressive to the expert, but the 1941 game in which Sinkwich passed to Lamar Davis for the winning touchdown on the last play, left the Bulldog with plenty of respect for Coach Jack Meagher's club.

Under ordinary conditions it would be natural to expect the Georgians to take Auburn lightly, but these are not ordinary times, so the Tigers come first. It is highly pleasing to Coach Butts, who long ago announced his policy was to play them as they came up to the schedule and let every Saturday take care of itself.

TRIPPI SCINTILLATES.

Incidentally, Trippi may have the best ground gaining record of any sophomore in the country this season.

Despite the fact his feats have been overshadowed by those of Sinkwich, who may break the ground-gaining record this week, Trippi has amassed a total of 352 yards on rushes and 452 on passing making a total of 1,004 for the season.

His passing average is phenomenal for a first year man. He has thrown 45, had 23 of them completed, and only five intercepted. It is a record that most experienced backs would be glad to own.

The Auburn game is a sellout, as it usually is. Which means some 20,000 spectators will witness the contest.

WARREN TO CUBS.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—(AP)—The Chicago Cubs announced today they had acquired Ben Warren, 29-year-old catcher, from the Philadelphia Phils on waivers.

John G. Caley Doing Big Job As Regional ODT Manager

Editor's Note—This is one of a series of articles dealing with the men in Atlanta whose unusual wartime jobs vitally affect the great American public.

By BETTY MATHEIS.

The Office of Defense Transportation's John G. Caley is a busy man these days. Regional manager of the ODT division of motor transport, Caley has the job of seeing to it that rubber and hauling equipment is used to capacity.

In addition, at the present time, Caley, together with his assistants in the 24 field offices throughout the southeast, is working at least 12 hours a day, including Sunday, to see that operators of commercial vehicles get their certificates of war necessity, so they can continue to operate after December 1. After that date, such certificates must be exhibited by operators in order to obtain gasoline, tires or spare parts.

Vehicles Affected. More than half a million vehicles in this area are affected by the ODT regulation requiring the certificates. In addition to trucks, buses and taxis, such vehicles as police cars, fire trucks, ambulances, hearses, garbage trucks and government cars except those being used full time by the armed services, are covered by the order. Private passenger cars are exempted.

One of the things that makes Caley bite his nails down to the quick is the fact that approximately 80 per cent of the applications for certificates are not completely filled out. "Every one of these people will have to be called to the nearest district office of ODT to give the information he has omitted when making his original application," Caley explained. "This means we will have to do a tremendous amount of extra work, and at the same time, the operator will be inconvenienced."

"To all commercial car operators who have not yet sent in their applications, I beg that they answer all the questions. There is nothing difficult about them. If there is any uncertainty about the information to be given, our field offices can answer the questions immediately. There are also some business firms, such as the companies which sell trucks, which are thoroughly familiar with the regulation and who are glad to give assistance."

A native of Bay Mills, Mich., who was transplanted to the south at the age of six months, Caley knows the trucking business from many years' connection with it. With the inception of the ODT, he was called to Washington consultation this past spring. "I went on the ODT pay roll on April 1," Caley explained, "but I had been working for them a good while before that." On April 8, he was transferred to the office here.

Maintains Humor. Maintaining his constant good humor despite fatigue occasioned by long hours at the office, and wearying journey to the field offices to iron out difficulties, Caley has great faith in the patriotic motives of the truck lines which it is now his job to regulate. "I used to be a trucker myself, and I know practically all the boys I have to deal with now. They are a group who want to cooperate. They want only to be told how they can use their equipment to help win the war," Caley declared.

For nine years the ODT manager served as vice president and general manager of Transportation, Inc., and for 14 years has been connected with the trucking business operating between the south and east.

He has held a number of offices in various organizations made up of officials of the common carrier lines.

Civilian Boards To Help Navy Get Officers

Permanent Committees Located at Rome, Augusta, Savannah.

Permanent civilian committees for naval officer procurement have been set up in Rome, Augusta and Savannah in connection with a drive for young men qualified for the Navy V-7 officer program, Lieutenant Commander Royce N. Flippin, U. S. N. R., officer in charge of the Atlanta Office of Naval Officer Procurement, located in the Healey building, announced yesterday.

Committee Heads. In Rome the committee is composed of the Rev. James Duncan, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal church; Tom Lamar, president of the First National Bank; E. L. Wright, headmaster of Darlington School; Van Enloe Jr., president of Enloe Drug Company; Frederick S. Cooper, president of Cooper Warehouse Company.

The Augusta committee is headed by W. R. Ringson, assistant secretary and treasurer of the Augusta Broadcasting Company and manager of radio station WRDW. Other members of the committee are: Mayor J. W. Woodall; Harry R. Creamer, president of the Augusta Chamber of Commerce and manager of the Augusta Coal & Ice Company; Elbert P. Peabody, president of the National Exchange Bank; Guy M. Merry, secretary of the Merry Brothers Brick & Tile Company; S. O. Houck, vice president and secretary of the Augusta Sporting Goods Company, and R. C. Baile Jr., president of the National Exchange Bank.

In Savannah the group is headed by Raymond M. Demere, president of the Colonial Oil Company. Other members of the committee are: Mayor Thomas A. Gamble; Nephew K. Clark, vice president and treasurer of the Liberty National Bank & Trust Company; Harben W. Daniel, general manager of radio station WSAV; Hugh Hill, of Haines, Jones & Company; Alvie Steele Jr., manager of the Atlantic Refining Company, and J. P. Miller, executive editor of the Savannah Morning News and Evening Press.

The committees will have charge of a continuous program of naval officer procurement in their respective cities and act as liaison between civilians who may qualify as naval officers and the Atlanta office.

Officer Requirements. Lieutenant Earl L. Hansell, U. S. N. R., of the Atlanta office in the Healey building, has pointed out at all the points where committees were set up to interview college graduates, 18 to 28, married or single, who may qualify for the V-7 program. Candidates, who will be commissioned as ensigns in the Naval Reserve after a streamlined indoctrinal course of four months, must have completed two semesters of college and one semester of trigonometry.

Others Eligible. In addition to the young men needed for the V-7 program, Commander Flippin said that officer candidates with the following qualifications were needed: Chaplains, ministers, 24 to 50 years old, with four years of college and three years of seminary training; instructors in training anti-submarine and attack units; material and spiritual things of this life and a large control of his own destiny.

"Peoples have grown terribly dissatisfied with the tremendous inequalities, dire poverty, great and periodic unemployment, prejudice, discrimination, lack of faith and cynicism of the last decades and this world-wide dissatisfaction is now belching forth in a terrifying force from the volcanic cone of faulty government and complacent society, whose cap has been blown off by hatreds and misery."

"Solutions of these problems must be sought and sought now as well as victory in arms, if we are to achieve a satisfactory peace and world tolerable to live in."

"In this effort the concerted thought and unselfish acts of every individual has weight. It is the sum of the acts and thinking of all which determines the direction of democratic action."

Civilization Faces Greatest Test, Says Jurist

Judge Underwood Tells Rome Jury Enduring Peace Needed.

ROME, Ga., Nov. 17.—(P)—World-wide dissatisfaction is "belching forth in a terrifying force from the volcanic cone of faulty government and complacent society," Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood told a grand jury here.

Opening the fall term of the northern district federal court, Judge Underwood said civilization was facing perhaps its greatest crisis.

"It is doubtful if civilization can withstand repeated cataclysms of war," he said, "so it behooves us to win this war and to achieve a peace that will endure."

"This does not mean a peace which will restore the world as it was, as most thinking people realize and many of the world's leaders are affirming that this is impossible."

He said a new world is in the making "which we hope will bring greater security to the common man, afford him more equal opportunity a greater share in the material and spiritual things of this life and a large control of his own destiny."

"Peoples have grown terribly dissatisfied with the tremendous inequalities, dire poverty, great and periodic unemployment, prejudice, discrimination, lack of faith and cynicism of the last decades and this world-wide dissatisfaction is now belching forth in a terrifying force from the volcanic cone of faulty government and complacent society, whose cap has been blown off by hatreds and misery."

WPB Prohibits Production Of Kitchen Tools and Utensils

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(P)—The War Production Board today prohibited, effective November 23, production of thousands of kitchen tools and utensils made of iron or steel.

Taking the final step in a series of orders designed to conserve metals going into kitchen gadgets, the order eliminated—as far as iron or steel is used—such common items as bottle openers, cork screws, dippers, sieves, bread boxes and jugs.

Metal Cut. In hundreds of other instances WPB permitted continued production on condition that metal use is cut drastically.

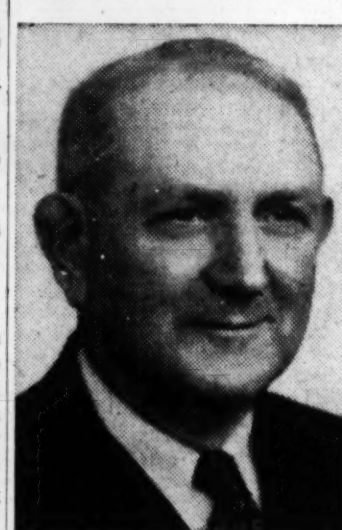

For instance, the small amount of metal allotted for can openers will be sufficient to make only the cutting part of this tool, necessitating wooden or other substitute handles.

The order applies, except in a few instances, to kitchenware manufactured for the armed forces as well as civilians.

Since the manufacturers and stores still have large quantities of these items, however, the result of the order may not become apparent to civilians for several months.

Newly weds may be the first to feel the pinch, because of their usual necessity of starting out with the purchase of new kitchen equipment.

Gallup Poll Reveals:

Pay-as-You-Go Plan Favored

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 17.—Although the Treasury Department has shown little enthusiasm for the Ruml Plan, facts collected by the Institute during the last few days indicate a growing need for some type of "pay-as-you-go" program to take care of the soaring income tax bill.

With this in mind, the Institute wired field reporters in a dozen of the large urban centers throughout the country to survey an accurate cross-section of income-tax payers on the pay-as-you-go question and to telegraph results back to its Princeton offices.

A vast majority of those interviewed are in favor of a government pay-as-you-go plan to collect taxes in preference to the present system of collecting taxes a year after the money has been earned.

Facts Revealed. The earlier, nationwide study indicating the growing need for the Ruml Plan or some similar "painless" method of putting the country on pay-as-you-go revealed three facts of vital importance to the Treasury and those interested in financing the war.

1. It was discovered that many people who will be required to pay income tax bills are uncertain as to whether they come within the provisions of the newly enacted tax bill.

2. Even those who know they will have to pay an income tax underestimate the extent of the new levies.

3. A majority of the people have not made any special provisions as yet to pay for the taxes that will come due in March.

Question Asked. Here is the question on the pay-as-you-go issue asked in the telegraphic survey:

"Next March 15 the government will collect an income tax on money that you earned throughout this year. Would you like to have that plan continue, or would you prefer to pay your taxes on the money as you earn it?"

SATISFIED WITH OLD PLAN 35%
PREFER TO PAY AS EARN 65%

The problem the Treasury Department faces is to effect the change from the present system to pay-as-you-go without making the people pay not only the previous year's but also current taxes.

The Ruml Plan, devised by Beardsley Ruml, treasurer of R. H. Macy & Company, Inc., would do this with a bookkeeping device which would in effect write off the 1942 income tax bill and credit the payments which fall due March 15 to taxes on 1943 earnings.

While the Ruml Plan has been widely discussed in Washington and among tax authorities throughout the country, the public has little knowledge of it, as shown by answers to the following question included in the telegraphic survey:

"Are you familiar with the Ruml Plan, a proposal for paying taxes on current income rather than on the previous year's income?"

FAMILIAR 22%
NOT FAMILIAR 78%

The Institute's findings would indicate, however, that the Ruml Plan or a similar plan will be very much in the news soon after the new congress convenes in January.

Fox, Walthour & Hood Helping in Effort To Combat Fires.

In co-operation with the United States Forestry Service's effort to combat destructive forest fires, Walthour & Hood Company is offering several prizes in sporting goods and free tickets to see the "Forest Rangers," beginning Friday at the Fox, to the Atlanta youngsters who bring in the most old cloth bags.

The cloth bags will be turned into "rag bags," which will be given to thousands of people who enter the nation's forest areas, to be used as containers for cigarette and matches, thus keeping down the fire hazard.

The contest, which is being co-sponsored by the Fox theater, will continue for only two more days. All boys and girls in Atlanta and vicinity under 16 years of age are urged to take part. By doing so youngsters will be performing a twofold purpose. They will be eligible for the three prizes of $5, $3 and $2 in merchandise and the free show tickets and will at the same time be helping to preserve our natural resources.

Those interested in entering the contest should take their flour, salt or sugar bags to Walthour & Hood, 41 Pryor street, before 6 o'clock tomorrow night. These sacks will be turned over to the government.

U. S. Hospital Offers Aid to Darlan's Son

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 17.—(P) Mayor Marvin L. Kline in a letter to President Roosevelt today offered the facilities of the General Hospital and the Sister Kenny method of treatment of infantile paralysis to the son of Admiral Jean Darlan, political leader of French North Africa.

Darlan's son is in Algiers stricken with poliomyelitis. This is believed to be the reason why Darlan went to Algiers.

It was suggested to the President Sunday night that a gesture of good-will toward the French would be the offer to send a transport plane to Algiers to bring the son of Darlan to the United States, where he might be given polio treatment.

Sister Kenny gave her support to the move by the mayor and said that she gave her "heartiest support" to the plan.

Clouds Are Lifting, Victory Inevitable, Welles Tells U. S.

Women Urged To Do Their Own Work

WAYCROSS, Ga., Nov. 17.—(AP)—The Georgia Women's Democratic organization adopted a resolution today recommending that all able-bodied housewives do their own work to free servants for service in the national war effort.

The Democratic women declared that all able-bodied women between 21 and 45 years old with no dependent children should enlist either in the WAACS, the WAVES, or in some defense activity.

Mayor W. L. Hinson welcomed the women holding their ninth annual convention. Organization officers include Mrs. Herbert Fay Gaffney, of Columbus, president; Mrs. J. W. Oglesby, of Quitman, recording secretary, and Mrs. D. M. Minchew, of Brunswick, treasurer.

clear that the enemy already has possession of the information and indicated that long-range social reforms have been shelved for the time being.

Foot Slipped Once.

"In time of peace," he said, "every variety of problem and issue is an interesting subject for public discussion. But in time of war the American people know that the one all-important job before them is fighting and working to win."

"Therefore, of necessity, while long-range social and economic problems are by no means forgotten, they are a little like books which, for the moment, we have laid aside in order that we might get out the old atlas to learn the geography of the battle areas."

He said he had made "a constant effort as commander-in-chief to keep politics out of this war." However, he added, his "foot slipped once."

Ten days before election day, an American aircraft carrier was torpedoed in the Pacific. No enemy vessels or planes were in the vicinity, when she sank some time later. No one knew whether the Japanese were aware that she had gone down. Such information, he said, has a definite bearing on future battle plans.

Cites His Mistake.

"We, for instance," he said, "know that we have sunk a number of Japanese aircraft carriers and we know that we have bombed and torpedoed others. We would give a king's ransom to know whether the latter were sunk or were saved, repaired and put back into commission."

At the time the American carrier was sunk, he continued, a clamor was being raised in the press and elsewhere against the suppression of news from the fighting fronts. Responsible authorities, he added, were of a divided opinion.

"Here came my mistake," Mr. Roosevelt continued, "I yielded to the clamor. I did so partly in realization of the certainty that if the news of the sinking were given out two or three weeks later it would be publicly charged that the news had been suppressed by me until after the election."

Facts "Paramount."

"Shortly thereafter protests came from the admirals in command in the southwest Pacific and at our great base in Hawaii on the ground that, in all probability, the Japanese navy had no information of the sinking and that handing them the information on a silver platter—although we were careful not to reveal the

"The men and women of the United States are now enabled to see for themselves the development of the strategic moves in which their commander-in-chief and their military and naval leaders are engaged," Welles said in a speech prepared for the New York Herald Tribune forum.

In a sarcastic reference to the recent second front clamor here and abroad at the time preparations were ripening for American intervention in North Africa, Welles suggested that Americans now can evaluate the clamor at its true worth.

"They now realize," he said, "that the prodigies of our self-appointed pundits who were constantly demanding the creation of a second front, was not required, and that the carefully thought out plans for the second front now in being had long since been conceived, and were already in process of realization while the clamor of these critics went on."

"They can now fully evaluate," he continued, "the lack of vision and of knowledge of those who demanded the abandonment of our whole policy toward the French people..."

Without referring directly to the bewilderment and disappointment voiced by Frenchmen in North Africa over the emergence of Jean Darlan in the North African picture, Welles stressed that:

"During these first days all arrangements which we may make with Frenchmen in North Africa are solely military in character..."

He added:

"It is the hope of all of us that all Frenchmen who represent or who are part of the forces of resistance to Hitler will unite as one in the support of our military endeavor."

"The final and crushing defeat of the Axis, however, will be the prelude to the grueling task of building a new world based on the four freedoms. That task, Welles warned, will require more than toil and sweat; it will call for the exercise of all the wisdom which men of today have gained from the experience of the past."

name of this carrier—gave them a military advantage which they would otherwise not have had. This confession of mine illustrates to the people of this country the fact that in time of war the conduct of that war, with the aim of total victory, comes absolutely first. They know that no one of their inalienable rights is taken away through the failure to disclose to them for a reasonable length of time, facts which Hitler and Mussolini and Tojo would give their eye teeth to learn. Facts therefore become paramount—facts that cannot be told to the public at the time, as well as facts that can and should be told at all times.

"Gigantic Job" Ahead.

"The posters that tell you, 'loose talk costs lives' do not exaggerate. Loose talk delays victory. Loose talk is the damp in the powder. We prefer to keep our powder dry."

Mr. Roosevelt said that "a gigantic job" lies ahead—with battle lines stretching from Kiska in the Aleutians to Marmansk, from Tunisia to Guadalcanal.

"The lines will grow longer as our forces advance," he said. Then, noting that "it would seem that a turning point of this war has at last been reached," and adding his warning that there was time only for working and fighting, he swung into a description of Admiral Callaghan's exploit.

LECTURER—Dr. Weston A. Price, Cleveland lecturer and dental authority, spoke before a meeting of the Fifth District Dental Society last night.

Malnutrition Is Bad as Axis, Authority Says

Dr. Weston A. Price Points to Dangers Facing World.

The civilized world faces as great a danger in physical and mineral degeneration as it does from the Axis partners, Dr. Weston A. Price, Cleveland lecturer, scientist and dental authority, declared here last night.

Speaking to a meeting of the Fifth District Dental Society in the Biltmore hotel, Dr. Price declared: "Unless the so-called civilized races find the courage to teach new generations to eat the proper foods, the civilized world stands to be overrun by primitive races."

Soviet Strength.

The Russians and Japanese, he continued, are stronger because vital minerals have not been removed from the food they eat. Both are stronger races, Dr. Price asserted, because they get more of vitamin "E"—the reproductive vitamin—from eating such foods as fish eggs.

Less civilized races also have better eyesight because they get more vitamin "A" from milk, he said, adding:

"Drinking milk is no assurance of obtaining the proper amount of vitamin 'A'. The cows that produce the milk must be given the proper food in order to produce the required vitamins."

Rapid Degeneration.

The physical, mental and moral degeneration of civilized man is "more rapid than we think," Dr. Price declared. His observation was based on years of research among primitive racial stocks.

As a means of combating malnutrition, Dr. Price urges special courses in proper feeding in high schools.

"The race is degenerating because parents are unfit to have children," he said. "Out of the average family, the first child is usually fairly strong. Others are less strong in the order of their birth."

Morals Sink.

Morals and ideals sink with the mineral and physical degeneration, Dr. Price continued. "The primitive races seldom have to bother with thieves. Their creed outlawed taking anything that belongs to someone else."

Dr. Price was introduced by Dr. James Alsbrook, president of the Fifth District Dental Society. The society reported a great improvement in the teeth of Atlanta school children last year.

Over 70 per cent of the children were able to obtain dental certificates without having work, it was pointed out.

Argentina War Minister Resigns From Cabinet

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 17.—(AP)—General Juan Tonazzi, war minister in the conservative cabinet of President Ramon S. Castillo, resigned tonight.

Text of Speech by Roosevelt On Herald Tribune Forum

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's speech tonight on the New York Herald Tribune Forum:

I have always welcomed the opportunity to participate in the Herald Tribune Forum because I have always been interested in the public presentation of all kinds of national problems.

In time of peace every variety of problem and issue is an interesting subject for public discussion.

But in time of war the American people know that the one all-important job before them is fighting and working to win. Therefore of necessity, while long-range social and economic problems are by no means forgotten, they are a little like books which for the moment we have laid aside in order that we might get out the old atlas to learn the geography of the battle areas.

In time of war your government cannot always give spot news to the people. Nearly everybody understands that—and the reason for it.

PEOPLE WITH FACTS CAN'T DISCUSS THEM

This means that those relatively few people who do have the facts from all over the world, not only every day but every hour, are precluded from discussing these facts publicly, except in the most general of terms.

If they did they would almost inevitably say things which would help the people who are trying to destroy us.

In reverse, those who are not in possession of all the news must almost inevitably speak from guesswork based on information of doubtful accuracy. They do not know the facts and, therefore, the value of their statements becomes greatly reduced. Nor must we, in the actual progress of the war, lend ears to the clamor of politics or to criticism from those who, as we know in our hearts, are actuated by political motives.

The fact that this type of criticism has done less harm in the United States than might be expected has been due to the good old horse sense of the American people. I know from a somewhat long experience—in wartime as well as in peacetime—that the overwhelming majority of our people know how to discriminate in their reading and in their radio-listening between informed discussion and verbal thrusts in the dark.

TRIES TO KEEP POLITICAL OUT OF WAR

I think you will realize that I have made a constant effort as commander-in-chief to keep politics out of the fighting of this war. But I must confess that my foot slipped once. About ten days before election day one of our aircraft carriers was torpedoed in the southwest Pacific. She did not sink at once, but it became clear that she could not make port. She was, therefore, destroyed by our own forces. We in Washington did not know whether the enemy was aware of her sinking—for there were no Japanese ships near enough to see her go down. You will realize, of course, that the actual knowledge of the loss of enemy ships has a definite bearing on continuing naval operations for some time after the event.

We, for instance, know that we have sunk a number of Japanese aircraft carriers and we know that we have bombed or torpedoed others. We would give a king's ransom to know whether the latter were sunk or were saved, repaired and put back into commission.

However, when we got news of the sinking of this particular ship a great issue was being raised in the congress and in the public vehicles of information as to the suppression of news from the fighting front. There was a division of opinion among responsible authorities.

MAKES MISTAKE—YIELDS TO CLAMOR

Here came my mistake. I yielded to the clamor. I did so partly in realization of the certainty that if the news of the sinking were given out two or three weeks later it would be publicly charged that the news had been suppressed by me until after the election.

Shortly thereafter protests came from the admirals in command in the southwest Pacific and at our great base in Hawaii on the ground that, in all probability, the Japanese navy had no information of the sinking and that handing them the information on a silver platter—although we were careful not to reveal the name of this carrier—gave them a military advantage which they would otherwise not have had.

This confession of mine illustrates to the people of this country the fact that in time of war the conduct of that war, with the aim of victory, comes absolutely first. They know that not one of their inalienable rights is taken away through the failure to disclose to them, for a reasonable length of time, facts that Hitler and Mussolini and Tojo would give their eye teeth to learn. Facts therefore become paramount—facts that cannot be told to the public at the time, as well as facts that can and should be told at all times.

LOOSE TALK DELAYS VICTORY

The posters that tell you, "Loose

Talk Costs Lives," do not exaggerate. Loose talk delays victory. Loose talk is the damp that gets into powder. We prefer to keep our powder dry.

We have a gigantic job to do—all of us, together. Our battle lines today stretch from Kiska to Marmansk, from Tunisia to Guadalcanal. These lines will grow longer, as our forces advance.

We have had an uphill fight, and it will continue to be uphill, all the way. There can be no coasting to victory.

During the past two weeks we have had a great deal of good news and it would seem that the turning point of this war has at last been reached. But this is no time for exultation. There is no time now for anything but fighting and working to win.

A few days ago, as our Army advanced through North Africa, on the other side of the world our Navy was fighting what was one of the great battles of our history.

A very powerful Japanese force was moving at night toward our positions in the Solomon Islands. The spearhead of the force that we sent to intercept the enemy was under the command of Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan. He was aboard the leading ship, the cruiser San Francisco.

SAILED INTO FOE GUNS BLAZING

The San Francisco sailed right into the enemy fleet—right through the whole enemy fleet—her guns blazing. She engaged and hit three enemy vessels, sinking one of them. At point-blank range, she engaged an enemy battleship—heavily her superior in size and firepower. She silenced this battleship's big guns and so disabled her that she could be sunk by torpedoes from our destroyers and aircraft.

The San Francisco herself was hit many times. Admiral Callaghan, my close personal friend, and many of his gallant officers and men gave their lives in this battle. But the San Francisco was brought safely back to port by a lieutenant commander, and she will fight again for our country.

The commander of the task force of which the San Francisco was a part has recommended that she be the first of our navy's vessels to be decorated for outstanding service.

But there are no citations, no medals, which carry with them such high honor as that accorded to fighting men by the respect of their comrades-in-arms.

The commanding general of the Marines on Guadalcanal, General Vandegrift, yesterday sent a message to the commander of the fleet, Admiral Halsey, saying, "We lift our battered helmets in admiration for those who fought magnificently against overwhelming odds and drove the enemy back to crushing defeat."

Let us thank God for such men as these. May our nation continue to be worthy of them, throughout this war, and forever.

British Official's Son To Speak On Air From Berlin, Nazis Say

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts), Nov. 17.—(AP)—The Berlin radio, in an announcement beamed to England, said tonight that "the son of a present British cabinet minister" will broadcast over the German station Thursday evening and following nights.

In earlier broadcasts the Berlin radio had said that John Amery, son of L. S. Amery, British secretary for India, had gone to Berlin voluntarily, but no mention was made of an intention to make radio addresses. The Germans obdurate, insisting, bit by bit, the full story of what they are trying to build up as a great propaganda scoop.

John Amery had been in Grenoble, in southern France. The Germans said he came to Berlin before the occupation of southern France by the German army.

In London L. S. Amery was mystified. He said his son was suffering from an affliction of the lungs and lived in southern France to benefit from the sunshine. He suggested that his son might have asked to go to Berlin for medical treatment.

At the Ordnance Motor Base

Private William B. Wolff, of Brooklyn, N. Y., attached to the Fourth Provisional Company, would like to add, "and then some," to the title of the book, "The Postman Always Rings Twice."

Private Wolff, during his recent confinement in the station hospital at Fort McPherson, where he underwent a tonsillectomy, received a total of 275 letters in 18 days, an average of 15 letters per day, from his family, his sweetheart and buddies in the service.

All soldiers with Sherlockian Holmesian qualities and a flair for sleuthing have an opportunity to win free 12-month subscriptions to YANK, the Army weekly newspaper, according to a full-page ad on the back of the current issue.

The new contest calls for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the following military oddities: Youngest master sergeant, oldest enlisted man, heaviest man in the Army, biggest family of men in the Army, largest feet in a pair of G. I. (government issue) shoes, a Marine who has served in the most foreign posts and a sailor who can tie the most knots. By mailing the names of "culprits" to YANK before December 1, soldier-detectors have a chance to receive the newspaper free for a whole year and, in addition, the winning "culprits" will be awarded identical prizes.

The Purchasing and Contracting Office, under the supervision of Captain Roy E. Bevel, has been moved to Candler warehouse, Glenn street and Murphy avenue. Candler warehouse, recently consolidated with the Ordnance Motor Base, is now known as the supply division, Atlanta Ordnance Motor Base.

Student-soldiers are strutting around camp chanting their suggestive parody to the popular, "Praise the Lord and pass the Ammunition!"

"Praise the Lord and pass out today furloughs,
Praise the Lord and pass out today furloughs,
Praise the Lord and pass out today furloughs,
And, we'll all go home."

By order of Colonel Roland L. Gaugler, commanding officer, all officers, enlisted men, and civilian employees on duty at the various offices at the base, observe two daily rest periods of ten minutes each. The first rest period is from 10 o'clock to 10:10 in the morning and the second from 3 o'clock to 3:10 in the afternoon. If the weather permits, all concerned leave their offices and go outside their respective buildings, with the exception of one person to receive incoming telephone calls.

Bankers To Talk About Man Power

Bankers, who throughout the nation have lost 70,000 trained workers to the armed services "with the end still not in sight," will discuss man power and other problems in two meetings in Atlanta this week, the first beginning today.

In the first, presidents and secretaries of bankers' associations from Virginia to Louisiana will meet in the Biltmore hotel, and in addition to the man power question will take up the sale of war bonds and how to increase them. The sessions close tomorrow.

On Friday, banks in six states, comprising the sixth federal reserve district, have been called to formulate methods for replacing bank workers who volunteer or are called to the colors. Representatives of some 500 banks in Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee are expected to attend this meeting.

Arnall To Seek Reaccrediting In December

Governor-Elect Plans To Appear Before Southern Group.

ALBANY, Ga., Nov. 17.—(AP)—Governor-elect Arnall said tonight he planned to appear in person before the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools December 1 to ask that accrediting be restored to Georgia educational institutions.

He spoke at a victory banquet here.

Arnall asserted that the next legislature would be asked to enact laws to keep any Governor "helped after from playing politics with the schools of our state."

He outlined the three most pressing needs of Georgia as a more efficient gearing of state affairs to the war effort, the rehabilitation of education and the growth of the agricultural program.

Attending the banquet were scores of newly elected representatives and senators from southern Georgia. John B. Wilson, secretary of state; Roy Harris, J. Lon Duckworth, chairman of the state Democratic executive committee, and others. The banquet was arranged by Arnall's Dougherty county supporters.

"We must gear the state to the government war effort," the young governor-elect declared. "There must be real co-operation between the state of Georgia and the government of the United States."

Referring to a White House conference he had last week with President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Arnall informed his listeners that "we have a real friend in the White House."

Dr. Watson Salutes Art Week In Talk at Clubs' Joint Parley

By EUGENIA BRIDGES HARTY.

A grey-haired educator from the Chicago Art Institute, who wears his black-ribboned pince-nez with veteran nonchalance, spoke for 30 minutes to 250 busy businessmen at a luncheon-meeting yesterday and left his audience applauding for more.

The occasion was a joint meeting of the Kiwanis, Optimists and Exchange Clubs for the purpose of saluting National Art Week. The speaker, Dr. Dudley Crofts Watson, who is the official lecturer for the Chicago Art Institute, is a celebrated art authority and world traveler.

Dr. Watson thanked the large group of clubmen for attending his lecture, implying that art is considered a pretty frightening subject by "We the People" and expressing his astonishment that he was finding art-interest among the laity all over the country today.

He paid tribute to the Atlanta-born artist, Julian Binford, whose one-man exhibition at the Midtown Galleries was featured in last Sunday's New York Times and whose paintings for a tiny Negro church in Virginia, near his home, are currently noted in Life magazine and will be followed up with an article in next week's Time magazine.

"His pay for the work at the church included 92 Hubbard squashes," Dr. Watson said, "and the Negroes will continue to bring him food out of their gardens this winter as installment payments." The speaker's subject was "Art in War, Art in Peace." In war, he says, art is a powerful force in aiding morale. It is the most effective method of putting over our propaganda. In peace, he says, it will be a substitute for war. And as a universal language, after we have won the war, it will hasten our under-

Judge Corrects Gullette Report

Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood last night corrected a report which had appeared in another newspaper that he had given a probationary sentence to Walter Lee Gullette, who entered a plea of guilty to a charge of violation of the national motor vehicle theft act at Rome, Ga., Monday.

The judge, speaking on long-distance from Rome, declared, "I have not yet passed sentence on him."

The early story had related that Gullette, because of his exemplary record on a merchant ship since the occurrence of the alleged offense, was put on probation.

According to the records of the court in Rome, Gullette is scheduled to be sentenced tomorrow.

What Vital Necessity is Now CHEAPER than Ever Before?

Yes, believe it or not, there is one vital necessity that doesn't cost more these days.

In fact, this important item is now much cheaper than ever before! Its name...

Automobile Liability Insurance

Why It's So Important

If you own a car, no matter how little you drive it, you need the protection and safety of Automobile Liability Insurance in The Travelers.

Accidents usually happen at the most unexpected, inconvenient times. Just ask yourself if you can take the time off from work to defend yourself in court. Of course your time is valuable these days—to yourself and to Uncle Sam.

And today, when your money is going for so many important things, including War Bonds, nobody wants to be saddled with a costly judgment.

Why It Costs So Little

This important rate reduction passes on to the buyers of Travelers Automobile insurance the savings made possible by gas and tire rationing and a nation-wide 35-mile speed limit. This is the fourth saving made available to buyers of Auto Liability Insurance within the last few years. The cost to private car owners is now from 25% to 50% less than before.

Maybe you are one of those who felt he never needed the protection of insurance. Maybe you have gotten along without it so far. But does it seem wise to you to tempt fate any longer when the cost of that ounce of prevention is now so little?

Why It's So Good To Have

The Travelers is a big company. Their representatives are everywhere, ready to aid you if you should have an accident. Before you drive your car another day without the protection of Liability Insurance, think of the important savings in time, trouble, and money that it can make possible for you. Remember, too, that you are protecting your home and your family as well—all at a rate so low that any man who drives a car can afford it.

New Pirates Pretty Enough To Stampede Any Stag Line

... THE PIRATE CLUB—like the pirates of old who sailed the seven seas and took what they wanted—has annexed such a cute and attractive group of new members that Sally couldn't resist printing their pictures. Of course, they're not the swash-buckling, knife-in-teeth type of pirate, but the kind that dons brief satin shorts and shiny pirate boots and looks adorable enough to cause a stampede in any stag line. You see, the Pirate Club is a social organization, and judging from the accompanying photograph the prime requisite for membership must be feminine pulchritude. Once a year they entertain formally—at a dance in the spring—but they are planning a function for December which is still in the indefinite stage.

Marion Moise is the popular president of the Pirates, and proof of their affection for her is the nickname "Mo," which they have given her. In fact, the Pirates seem to go in for nicknames. For instance, there is Marion Quisenberry, who is pretty enough to head a beauty parade, and who is never called anything but "Quissie." Then there is Jean Fraser, who is known as "Fearless." The name, it seems, was given her by one of her boy friends and comes from the jingle, "Fearless Jean, the Princess Queen."

Frances Massey's nickname, "Maddog," is inexplicable, as is Matilda Martin's name, "Gooch." Florence Akers' younger brother, John, gave her the name "Tidda," because he couldn't say "Sister." And the Pirates have taken it up. Clara Jones goes by the name "Miss J." which is obvious. And Matilda Turner's name has been shortened to "Teal."

If you have an easy chair which is not in use, why not contribute it to the new Officers' Lounge recently opened at the Atlanta Hospitality Hotel by the Patriotic Atlantians? It has contributed numerous articles and furnishings to the room, but a comfortable arm chair is still needed.

... THIS WEEK a duo of charming young Atlanta matrons, Anne (Mrs. Muddock) Eguen and Maude (Mrs. Herman) Eguen, are the fete guests of Mrs. George M. Ivey in Charlotte, N. C. Mrs. Ivey, you will recall, is the former Lula Groves Campbell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. L. Campbell, of Atlanta, and was Anne's roommate at Agnes Scott. In fact, it was Groves who introduced Anne to Dr. Eguen. Maude and Groves played together when they were little girls in pig tails, so there will be far-into-the-night reminiscing in the Ivey home during the visit, interspersed with many social festivities planned by Groves' hosts of friends.

... THE ENGAGEMENT of lovely Frances Bird, of Valdosta, to Charlie Jones, which was announced Sunday, is the denouement of a childhood friendship, for they have known each other since Frances was 12 years old. You see, Frances' father, Dr. Frank Bird, began his medical career in the office with Charlie's father, the late Dr. Willis Jones, and they were the best of friends.

No announcement of the season enlists more cordial interest in Atlanta, for though the future bridegroom now lives in New York, he represents one of the city's most beloved families. His late mother was, before her marriage, Lena Swift, the sister of Mrs. Mitchell King and Mrs. Eugene Dickey.

Everyone who knows Frances is enthusiastic about her beauty, for, according to report, she is one of the prettiest girls who ever grew up in south Georgia. And her fiancé is as brilliant as she is beautiful having been a first honor graduate at Cornell and also a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

... THE WARTIME tempo of life brings about many unheralded weddings that take relatives and friends of the brides and bridegrooms completely by surprise. Such was the case in the wedding of Lieutenant Arthur W. Sobey and his bride who figured in a very romantic ceremony last week.

In company with Lieutenant Sobey, the former Yancey Anne Gaugler, went out to Conley to witness the marriage of Lieutenant Theron R. Oakes and Mrs. Oakes, which took place in the post chapel with Chaplain Ferdinand Hipps officiating.

They didn't have the slightest idea of getting married, themselves, but Cupid, that sly little minx, was on his job, and just as soon as the first ceremony was over, Lieutenant Sobey lost no time in persuading his sweetheart that there was no time like the present to become Mrs. Sobey. Thereupon Chaplain Hipps was called upon to go through with another marriage ritual in the same little chapel.

Diminutive Yancey Anne, who is a brown-eyed and brown-haired beauty, wore a black crepe dress with a red sequin floral design embroidered on her left shoulder, and a smart red hat trimmed with red ostrich feathers, which were very becoming to her brunet type of loveliness. Lying in a box at the Peachtree road residence of the bride is an exquisite white satin wedding dress bought in San Francisco by Mrs. Roland Gaugler, the mother of the bride, who planned a church wedding for her daughter.

Yards and yards of real lace destined to be worn by Yancey Anne are nestled close by the traditional white satin gown. Leonora Gaugler, young sister of the bride and a popular student at Washington Seminary, would have been maid of honor had the plans materialized.

Although the marriage was entirely unheralded, the romance of Lieutenant Sobey and his bride began over a year ago in San Francisco, when Colonel and Mrs. Gaugler and their family were residents of that California city. The bride and her dashing officer-husband are residing with Colonel and Mrs. Gaugler at their Peachtree road home, and will be attractive acquisitions to the younger married contingent of civilian and military society.

Dr. Baker Lectures Today at Fernbank

In celebration of book week at Fernbank Forest Mrs. Edward Daniel and her committee of garden club leaders will sponsor a lecture at Fernbank today at 3:30 o'clock. Dr. Woolford Baker, geologist and a pioneer of the Fernbank Forest conservation movement, will take on "Nature in Literature" and a botanical display of the woods, the ferns and the highly colored autumn leaves of the Forest will be held. Mrs. Robert Pringle will be co-hostess at the lecture.

Friends interested in the Forest Center are urged by Mrs. Daniel to help fill the yawning shelves with books on gardening, flowers, the forest or any nature subject. Of particular interest are the shelves of garden and nature books presented by Miss Emily Harrison, among other gifts and loans to the Fernbank association.

One rare loan is a first edition of the wood cuts by Sir Thomas Bewick who in 1756 illustrated "The History of British Birds" and nature subjects. The largest book in the book week display at Fernbank is an elephant-size antiphonal found in a Spanish monastery by Dr. George Brown, of Georgia Tech. The words are written in Latin on ancient vellum of the fifteenth century, illuminated by the rare painted alphabet of the day. The binding seems to be of later date, though centuries old.

The general book chairman of the week invites not only the adult garden lovers today, but their children and friends are invited Saturday at 10 o'clock to the story hour "Uncle Remus" conducted by Mrs. Rutherford Ellis and Mrs. Howard Candler Jr., who will exhibit the Junior League puppet show in the Uncle Remus stories. The hostess for the day will be Mrs. Fred Hodgeson, who will chaperone the children over the newly arranged Children's Museum. The children will bring books for the Children's Nature Library.

Firmness Is Only Answer For Meddling Mother-in-Law

By Dixie George

Dear Dixie:

It's my mother-in-law. She keeps my husband and me quarreling all of the time. It is even worse now that we have a baby, the only grandchild. She is forever bossing me and telling me how to raise my baby. I couldn't stand it any longer at one time and told her to stay out of our business in a nice way. But now it is worse than ever.

She even thinks she has the right to tell me whom I can leave the baby with if I have to go into town. It would be impossible for me to write you all the trouble she has caused us. We live close by and see her two and three times a day. There is no way I can avoid her. As things are now, we cannot move for some time. She talks to my husband behind my back and puts ideas into his head that he would never have thought of himself. Since she is his mother, he believes her and does not take up for me at all. When she leaves my house after doing these things her way, I get so upset that I take it out on my husband.

A WIFE.
Your mother-in-law is just another woman isn't she? And there is no woman that another woman can't get the best of at some time. Forget about this woman being your mother-in-law, if you can, and treat her as though she were another woman meddling in your affairs. You would not permit another woman to come into your home and boss you around and tell you what to do about your child, would you? You would not take orders from another woman and you would not let another woman influence your husband against you (if you caught up with her in time). Of course, this woman is his mother, and has a slight advantage over you, but fundamentally she is a woman, so use womanly tactics against her. For awhile there will be a lot of coolness, but hold your ground and don't give in an inch.

If she wants to suggest your way of living there is one of two courses open to you. First let her suggest and then you do what you wish, ignoring her suggestions. Second when she suggests tell her firmly and with a steel glint in your eyes that you are perfectly capable of running your own home, taking care of your husband and your baby. You might also add that when her suggestions meet with your approval you are perfectly willing to accept them, but if not, you are running your home to suit yourself. As for your husband, tell him that when you married, you married him and not his mother, and he will have to respect you as his wife and not listen to what his mother tells him. Also, tell him that you know he loves his mother and wants to believe her in what she tells him, but that where you are concerned, you expect to speak for yourself when and how you wish. You might also add that if he continues to be so completely under his mother's domination, that you will stamp him as a failure to you and the baby. Tell him you always considered him a man of strength and character, and that you want to continue thinking this way, but that if he continues to let his mother tell him what to do, you will have to consider him a failure to you and the baby. That your life with him will be another story.

Hosiery Lures Mob Of South Africa Women

Women fought frantically in six-deep queues at Johannesburg, South Africa, when a new stock of hosiery was placed on sale. A one-pair limit failed to daunt purchasers, who merely detoured and sought to purchase more until a melee resembling a football scrimmage resulted. Notices just placed in stores limit hosiery sales to the hours of 11:30 a. m. to 2:30 p. m., but only stockings in gunmetal and black remain.

Movie Stars Unable to Find Maids Now Display Their Dishpan Hands

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13.—Sights and sounds:

Great pictures always get under way with a flash and flourish that leaves no one in this movie-minded nation unaware of what's going on. But the last day's shooting is something else again. Everybody's fed up, anxious to get away for a rest or to start other assignments. First to the last day provides a dismal contrast.

We couldn't help ruminating

By Harold Heffernan.

over this as we watched Director Sam Wood shoot his final scene in "For Whom the Bell Tolls." It was on October 30, 1940, that Paramount bought Ernest Hemingway's best seller for $150,000. The publicity drums began beating with a roar heard in all available parts of the world. Louis Bromfield was brought to town from his farm in Ohio to write the screen play. There was great public casting of the picture, with every feminine star in Hollywood considered for the plum role of Maria. A budget of $2,670,000 was set on the film. Last November 10 production actually got under way.

A few days ago, "FWTBT" came to a shooting end. It ended with Gary Cooper, the hero, sunning himself at Palm Springs. Ingrid Bergman, the heroine, out of town for ten days. Katina Paxinou, the Greek actress, home working on her memoirs. Akim Tamiroff in the wardrobe department testing for his next role. It ended on the studio's back lot. No fuss, no fury. Director Wood looks exhausted. He called his final "cut" in a tired voice, as three extras, known to none but their intimates, made their last gesticulations before the camera and walked over to the pay office to pick up $7.50 checks.

So many screen stars are doing their own housework, cooking and washing these days that it's become an old story. Even the press agents have given up trying to plan such heart-breaking items. However it's true and interesting that most actresses are doing their home chores with the best of good humor.

Tyrone Power's Annabella has closed the second floor of their big Bel-Air home, and the couple lives on the lower floor. She says housework is fun.

Maureen O'Hara cooks three nights a week, after returning from the studio, and says she and her husband, Will Price, eat out the other four evenings.

George Montgomery lives at home with his parents and seven other relatives. All have individual household routines to perform.

Joan Crawford hasn't had a maid in two months. "At the Cock and Bull" the other night, she was displaying her "dishwater" hands to friends.

The few domestics now available demand that the stars come to them for interviews. Working conditions must be ideal and the price scale in keeping with well-paying jobs now available at local defense plants.

Virginia Wilson, pretty, young dancer at 20th Century-Fox, taking a recess from rehearsal, spotted a broken motorcycle just outside the building. Impetuously, she leaped aboard the vehicle, spun the starter—and went head over shoulders as the thing went into reverse.

As they were carrying Virginia into her apartment with a sprained shoulder, the phone was ringing. It was a message from Seattle, a friend of her fiancé, Lieutenant Thomas Chaffield, telling her that Chaffield was in the hospital with a broken shoulder—suffered in a motorcycle accident. They were to have been married next week.

Virginia will be laid up at least two weeks, her fiancé about two months.

MY DAY: Difficulties Of Transportation

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

LONDON, England, Monday.—On Friday evening a few old friends dined with us and on Saturday I went over to make a recording early in the morning. On my return to the apartment, I had a very interesting talk with Mr. Ernest Bevin and Mr. Ince. After that, the high commissioners of four dominions came to call and General Smuts also dropped in.

I feel sorry that I have not been able to see much of the work done here for, and with, the dominion groups, but in many ways it seems to be similar to the work done by the British and Americans.

I stopped at the British-Speaking Union a little later and met a number of their board members and other distinguished guests. I saw a distributing post from which gifts from the English-Speaking Unions in America are issued. They say they have been sent a tremendous number of very useful things and are most grateful.

Second-hand garments can be given out without coupons, just as it is being done in other depots. That means a great deal to people who have been bombed out and have nothing left. Then we went to another room, where guides are furnished to Americans over here and any information Americans may desire can be obtained. I think this is a most valuable service, because if anything is more confusing than to land in London and be friendless, it is to find oneself alone in New York City. If you lose your way here in a fog, you are apt to be a long while finding your way again. People have been known to take four hours to reach a place where in ordinary times could be walked in 15 minutes.

I think one of the greatest difficulties for our American men is the fact that there really are so few ways of getting about. After a comparatively early hour, the buses and trains become fewer as time goes by and the blackout is so gloomy it is far pleasanter to stay in a well-lighted, cheerful house, even though every curtain must be carefully drawn and not one light must shine out through a chink.

You have to become accustomed to getting in, out and around brick walls, which are erected to keep light from shining from the doorway. Where that protection has not been built, the light has to be turned out before the door is opened, or there is a heavy black curtain inside the door. This is one of the reasons why I feel it is so important that plenty of entertainment should be provided during the winter at our American Red Cross centers and at the camps themselves.

I lunched with a large group of old Allenswood school friends. Mrs. C. L. Fitzwilliams arranged the luncheon and it was so pleasant and interesting to see these companions of my girlhood days in England. We have all changed a great deal, but some of us have kept characteristics, which make us recognizable in spite of intervening years.

A short movie was shown of Mrs. Fitzwilliams' country house, Greatford Hall, where her husband has developed the growing of watercress. I was much interested to see how this was done on a large scale. As a food, watercress has many valuable vitamins.

I spent the afternoon seeing a succession of visitors. A group came in at tea time which included my cousin, Stewart Alsop, who is here in the British army. Finally, Mr. and Mrs. David Gray dined with us, and we had a delightful evening talking of home people and happenings.

Follow-Up Treatment for Syphilis

By Dr. William Brady.

Referring to your recent talk about syphilis (writes a reader), if blood tests and spinal fluid tests are negative where would the disease remain in the system? According to your statement, there is no positive cure for the disease. This seems rather hopeless for one who has had the disease. My doctor, having taken two spinal fluid tests and several Wassermann blood tests advises me that all the tests were negative and so I have nothing to worry about. (T.M.A.)

The reader continues: The only warning sign I have had for some time is a tight feeling or pressing feeling, as if I had a tight hat on.

The "statement" in my article (released for publication here September 30, '42 under the title "The Third Stage of Syphilis"), was this: "My advice is that, in my opinion, once syphilis always syphilis, and regardless of positive or negative blood or spinal fluid tests the patient should make it a lifetime rule to receive a course of antisyphilitic treatment from a good physician once a year as the best means of obviating development of syphilitic lesions in central nervous system, internal organs or tissues."

That is merely my opinion and my advice. It is precisely the course I'd follow if I had syphilis. Another statement—and this, I believe, is one of fact, not just my opinion, in that article was as follows:

"After the first two years syphilis becomes practically uncommunicable... and ordinary soap and water cleanliness is sufficient assurance against accidental infection of any one."

My goodness! I thought the general effect of that article would be beneficial. I did not believe there was anything in it that would discourage anybody.

If the Missourian really had syphilis 30 years ago, as he says, his present condition would indicate that he must have developed excellent immunity and should the disease ever again become active that immunity plus a course of medical treatment will probably control it.

As for the tight feeling or pressure in the head—that hardly suggests syphilis. Such a common complaint is due perhaps to excessive smoking, or to some other condition unrelated to syphilis. Of course, there should be a hemoglobin and red corpuscle count and chemical and microscopic urinalysis.

I agree with the patient's doctor—the patient has nothing to worry about so far as syphilis is concerned.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS Food Follies.

I am a girl 13 years old. I can't eat soft-boiled eggs. They make me sick. Mother won't let me have fried eggs. What should I do in order to have an egg a day? (M. A.)

Answer—If you were my daughter, Milzi, you would have no problem at all. Tell mother that I say every one should have eggs cooked as he or she prefers—that is the way eggs are most digestible and best for good nutrition.

A Word to the Deaf.

Interested in allusions to mechanical hearing aids. Happy to report that the company has given very good service in seeing that my husband got hearing from his electrical instrument. I would suggest that deaf persons patronize a reliable company that guarantees satisfactory hearing rather than the product they sell. (MRS. C. P. W.)

Answer—Thank you, Ma'am. It is well to rent the instrument (for a reasonable rental charge) and use it for a month or so to see whether it gives any satisfaction before you sign any agreement to purchase. On request, if you inclose stamped envelope bearing your address, I will mail you a pamphlet on "Head Noises (Tinnitus) and Deafness."

Miss Julia Ann Patch Weds Lt. Drummond in Washington

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 17. St. Margaret's church here formed the setting this afternoon for the marriage of Miss Julia Ann Patch, lovely daughter of Major General and Mrs. A. M. Patch, of Decatur, Ga., to Lieutenant Charles Manly Drummond Jr., of Camp Davis, N. C., and Spartanburg, S. C. The ceremony was solemnized at 5:30 o'clock by Rev. Armand T. Eyer. Raymond Rapp presented the music.

The church was illuminated entirely by candlelight, and the altar was banked with palms as a background for vases filled with white flowers.

C. M. Drummond Sr., of Spartanburg, S. C., acted as best man for his son. George Drummond, Lieutenant Jackson Balch, Lieutenant William Alfriend, Tom Perin, Alexander Gordon and J. D. Patch were the groomsmen.

Miss Ruth Little Owens was her cousin's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Helen Jane Schmidt, of Camp Rucker, Ala., and Miss Betty Alden Waitt. They were gowned in models of gold tulle and wore short, semicircular veils of gold tulle. Their bouquets were of bronze and gold chrysanthemums.

The pretty young bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Major General J. D. Patch, of Camp Forrest, Tenn. She wore a lovely gown of white satin, featuring a fitted bodice, long, pointed sleeves and a full skirt, which fell into a long train. Her veil of illusion fell from a cap of rosepoint lace belonging to her paternal grandmother. She carried a white prayer book centered with an orchid and showered with bouvardia.

Mrs. Patch wore for her daughter's wedding a model of two-toned blue crepe, a violet hat and a shoulder spray of orchids. Mrs. Drummond, mother of the groom, wore a costume of cell blue crepe with matching hat and a cluster of orchids.

Following the ceremony Mrs. Patch entertained at a reception for the families and out-of-town guests, after which the couple left by motor for a wedding trip to Virginia and the Carolinas. The bride traveled in a brown wool suit, topped by a brown fur coat. Her hat was a feather model and a cluster of orchids completed the ensemble. The couple will reside at Wrightsville Beach, N. C., near Camp Davis, where the groom is an instructor at the Officers' Candidate school.

Out-of-town guests included Major General and Mrs. J. D. Patch, of Camp Forrest, Tenn.; Mrs. T. H. Russell, Miss Elizabeth Atkinson, Mrs. W. C. Owen, all of Staunton, Va., and Colonel and Mrs. I. W. Little, of Governor's Island, N. Y.

Atlanta Doctors Volunteer To Fly To 'Rick'

Physicians Who Treated Flyer Here Offer Services Again.

Two Atlanta physicians who nursed Captain Eddie Rickenbacker through a narrow brush with death here two years ago, volunteered to fly out and treat the famous air ace of World War I when he was found by a Navy plane last week in the south Pacific.

That was revealed yesterday by Mrs. Rickenbacker in New York, when she told newsmen that her husband is in "very good health." However, the War Department has remained silent on the whereabouts of the famous flyer, even to his wife.

The Atlantas—Dr. Floyd W. McRae and Dr. James E. Paulin—telephoned Mrs. Rickenbacker Saturday and volunteered their services after a Navy announcement that the captain had been rescued.

Dr. Paulin, who saw Mrs. Rickenbacker in Washington on November 8—one week before her husband was found—said "we would do anything on earth for Eddie."

"I called Mrs. Rickenbacker as soon as I heard Eddie had been found and told her that I would be glad to do anything I could," Dr. McRae also made a similar long-distance call.

"It was possible that we might have been of service since we had treated Rickenbacker before," Dr. Paulin said. "I would go to the end of the earth for Eddie, for in my opinion, he is one of the most valuable citizens we have."

Kept Hoping.
Mrs. Rickenbacker was in Washington a week ago Saturday to seek news of her husband, Dr. Paulin continued. She doggedly clung to the hope that he would be found as Army and Navy planes combed the Pacific in the area where Rickenbacker radioed an appeal for help a month ago.

Then—last Friday—a Navy plane picked up a member of the crew floating in a rubber raft. The search for Rickenbacker and the remainder of his crew was intensified during the night and the following day he was spotted by a Navy plane.

Rickenbacker apparently came through 24 days aboard a rubber raft in the open Pacific none the worse for his experience.

In Good Health.
Lieutenant General Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, disclosed that the captain was in "very good health," but not state where he is. Mrs. Rickenbacker told newsmen. "Finding out that he was all right was most important," she said. "That's what I was worried about."

The two Atlanta physicians cared for the famous flyer when he was injured in the crash of an Eastern Airlines passenger plane near here nearly two years ago. Rickenbacker remained near death for three weeks before he rallied and began to show signs of improvement.

Public Apathy Is Blamed For Great Losses

Chancellor S. V. Sanford Flays Congressmen in Talk Here.

Public and congressional apathy, which permitted the Navy to fall below treaty strength was held responsible for great losses of men and materials last night by Chancellor S. V. Sanford of the state university system.

"A second best Navy is no better than a second best poker hand," he told members of the National Fertilizer Association, holding their eighth southern convention in the Biltmore hotel, last night. "Valuable and accurate information gained as to conditions in enemy nations has been set at naught by the shortsighted, vacillating public officials influenced by pacifists and so-called anti-war groups." Those activities were joined by those whose secret motives were the protection of disorder, resulting in delaying preparedness.

"The cost to our government in men and material is multiplied in a program of climbing from unpreparedness to preparedness in the face of the enemies' guns. It is this situation that the radicals who still infest the United States, insidiously working for their intangible new day, have sought to create."

Fertilizer men will close their meeting today with a panel discussion of the industry for distribution of fertilizer in 1943.

Blind Man Indicted On Charge of Murder

For the first time in many years, a blind man was indicted on a charge of murder yesterday by the Fulton county grand jury. The accused is Willie Jackson, alias "Blind Jack," a Negro, aged 37, living in the rear of 62 Butler street. The indictment charges him with fatally stabbing a Negro girl, Margie Lee Brooks, 19, of the same address.

According to Calvin Cole, homicide investigator of the solicitor general's office, and Detective C. L. Taylor, the blind man seized and stabbed the girl unexpectedly with a pocket knife when she came near him.

Cannons, Fired at Japanese In 1905, Turned in as Scrap

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—The Navy program for scrapping relics, commemorative pieces and discarded equipment has netted more than 7,000,000 pounds of metal, including two old Spanish cannons which once fired directly at a Japanese delegation attending a peace conference at Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

"When the Japanese envoys to the Russo-Japanese peace conference in 1905 landed at the Portsmouth Navy Yard," a Navy press release said, "a salute was fired by the two guns."

"At that time, it was considered unfortunate that the position of the guns was such that they fired directly at the Japs advancing from the landing."

The 5.3-inch rifles, which stood in front of the administration building at the navy yard were taken from the captured Spanish cruiser Vizcaya in 1898.

The Navy said in addition to the 7,000,000 pounds already contributed to the war effort, additional quantities of metal are being turned in as the drive continues and reported some of the sources from which much scrap has been or will be obtained.

More than 5,000 pounds has been dug out of ravines, woods, and remote shore areas in the vicinity of the naval mine depot at Yorktown, Va.

The Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla., has salvaged 110 tons of old smooth bore cannon and cannon balls, nine tons of anchors and a large brass propeller weighing 3,848 pounds.

Relics salvaged at the New York City Navy Yard included two breech-loading rifles weighing 10,000 pounds each, which were taken from the Spanish flagship the Cristina after destruction of the Spanish fleet at Manila in 1898.

The Puget Sound Navy Yard at Bremerton, Wash., has salvaged bronze plates containing historical data from the United States ships Chauncey, Huron, Arctostook and Missoula and bow ornaments from the Philadelphia and the Seattle.

Josephus Daniels, of Raleigh, N. C., secretary of the Navy during the first World War, has turned in an old German gun which had been loaned to him.

Unknown Man Is Found Dead In Gully Here

Badly Decomposed Body Discovered Off Boulevard.

Two school boys on their way home late yesterday discovered the badly decomposed body of a middle-aged white man, lying in a shallow gully a short distance off S-uth Boulevard and near the federal prison.

Radio Patrolmen R. L. Burden and W. E. Belcher, who investigated, said the man evidently had been dead "for at least a month."

He was wearing a light striped shirt, blue trousers to match, dark blue socks and tan shoes. "As near as we could tell he had light brown or blond hair," Burden said.

A pistol was found near the body. No papers were found to identify the man, officers said.

A coroner's jury was assembled to view the body, according to Mrs. Paul Doneoh, Fulton county coroner. The jury was dismissed and will be assembled later to hear full reports of an investigation by city detectives. The body was taken to the chapel of Awtry & Lowndes.
